RAISE INCOME TAX: DECISION OF DEMOCRATS

Roosevelt Talks to Congress Leaders.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—A program for balancing the federal budget, under which income taxes will be boosted, was agreed upon late tonight at a conference between Democratic leaders of congress and President Elect Roosevelt.

The conferees decided to accept the figures of President Hoover and the treasury department which fix the 1933 deficit at 492 million dollars, and, to meet the deficit, it was agreed to effect an additional saving in the budget estimate of 100 millions, to enact a beer bill estimated to produce 125 millions, to continue the gasoline tax of 1 cent per gallon to produce 137 millions, and to increase the income tax rates to produce 150 millions.

These four figures total 512 million dollars, and the expressed hope of this conference of Democratic leaders was that the enactment of the program would produce a balanced budget.

Will Reduce Exemptions.

The income tax increases would affect every income tax payer. The agreement reached tonight provides that exemptions for married individuals be reduced from the present $2,500 to $2,000. The exemption of unmarried persons would stand at $1,000. It is proposed to increase the rates on net incomes from the present 4 to 8 per cent to new rates of from 6 to 12 per cent.

It was regarded significant that the Democrats do not propose any increase in the surtax rates.

The conference agreement contemplates that President Hoover will not veto any part of the program. In effect the Democrats have decided to lay their proposals before the President as a means of compelling him to accept them or to accept the responsibility for a failure to balance the budget. It was emphasized that a Hoover veto of the beer bill would throw the budget out of balance, and the Democrats were hopeful the President will be compelled to accept the restoration of real beer to the American people.

May Avoid Special Session.

If the program is adopted, together with the farm relief bill, which President Elect Roosevelt indicated tonight had his complete support, a special session of the new congress after the Roosevelt régime opens next March 4 may be averted, it was stated. The Democratic congressional leaders and Mr. Roosevelt both voiced hopes that a special session will not be necessary.

Tonight's conference was held in Mr. Roosevelt's New York house at 49 East 65th street. The Democratic leaders, headed by Speaker John N. Garner of the house and Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader of the senate, gathered in a circle about President Elect Roosevelt in the latter's study on the second floor.

After the session newspaper men were admitted to the mansion. They found Speaker Garner and Senator Robinson delegated as spokesmen for the delegation of eleven congressmen who journeyed up here today from Washington.

One Point of Difference.

The two leaders, backed up against a wall, announced the details of the agreement. Both hesitated to say that Mr. Roosevelt had given the program his complete approval.

"You may say," explained Senator Robinson, "that the feeling of the conference was quite unanimous as to these proposals."

Later it was disclosed from a source close to the President elect that the tax program was presented by the congressional leaders and that, while he did not approve, he did not voice any disapproval. The decision to raise the income taxes, it was stated for Mr. Roosevelt, was made not by himself, but by the congressmen.

Total Slash 580 Millions.

The 100 million slash of the budget estimates, it was declared, is in addition to the 480 million dollar economy recommendations of President Hoover. While the Democrats in the congressional deliberations have declined to accept all of the President's program, it was stated tonight upon the authority of President Elect Roosevelt that the total cut under the 1932 appropriation bill will be at least 580 millions.

It was agreed at the conference, according to Garner and Robinson,

BIRTHPLACE AND RESTING-PLACE

FROM THE VALLEY TO THE MOUNTAIN TOP

COOLIDGE'S LIFE WAS REFLECTION OF NATIVE HILLS

Vermont Origin Key to Character.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

It would be pleasant to think of Calvin Coolidge as safely home at last in the hills of New England, in the home of his father. That old white farmhouse at Plymouth Notch, Vt., where he was born and where, by the light of an oil lamp, he was sworn in as President on the night of Aug. 3, 1923, will ever remain for the American people as his proper setting, and these hills which gave him strength alone can sing his rightful requiem.

That steady, serene, ruggedly honest influence touched the life of the American nation at a moment when it was sorely needed, when the old ark of the covenant of Presidents with their people seemed in need of repair. From the moment when Calvin Coolidge took the oath of office on the family Bible in the old parlor with the horsehair furniture, on the night of the death of President Harding, there was never any more doubt in the minds of the people about things in Washington so far as the presidential office was concerned.

Honest and Shrewd.

It has been said by those who were close to him that there was never a dishonest or crooked paper signed on the White House desk if Coolidge knew about it. And he was a very shrewd man, for, with the deeper virtues with which his native hills had endowed him, there was the practical, keen insight into the motives of men, especially politicians.

Mr. Coolidge spent twenty-four years in political office in preparation for the national task which awaited him in 1923 and which he carried out with success until he voluntarily retired from office in 1928. There is little doubt that he could have been nominated and elected in 1928 if he had chosen to run again.

But he felt that he had done all that there was for him to do, had reached the limit of his strength, and had run the race set for him. There was something of Calvinistic fatality in his view of men and affairs, their allotted relations and interactions. He had his own clear vision of what was required of him and made his decisions alone.

Famous Decision of 1927.

This writer was with Mr. Coolidge a good deal in Washington, Plymouth, and in the Black Hills, where he made his famous decision on Aug. 2, 1927, not to run for President the following year, thus unleashing the eager group of Hoover men who were anxious to push the "chief" into the race.

His method of reaching that decision had something of the bleak, stern finality of the Vermont hills in it. He did not take any one into his confidence. Delegation after delegation had called upon him to urge him to announce his candidacy. He had been promised the presidency on a silver platter. He had smiled and offered his visitors a cigar and had talked about the weather and Dakota farming and fishing, and they had gone away as wise as when they came on their mission.

Mr. Coolidge went fishing or sat alone in his limousine, smoking his favorite black stogies, on long rides over the South Dakota hill country which he liked so well. He would stop the car and sit for some time watching the cattle in a field, or the shadows falling on the long green slopes of the hills.

Lived at State Lodge.

He lived at the state game lodge that summer, 12 miles from town, where few could penetrate. He began to learn to play and to loaf. The cowboys, the wild, rough life of the west, fascinated him, and he even talked of buying a little farm out there. He thought he was entitled to a rest.

That would not have moved him, however, if he had conceived it his duty to go ahead. Something else, an inner sense, told him what that was. In the old fashioned religious sense he "talked with God."

Even his wife did not know that he had made a decision which was to change the political history of the nation and have world-wide effects when he drove to town that golden August morning. He received the newspaper correspondents in the prim schoolhouse office which had been given to him for the summer, at the appointed hour of 10 o'clock, and talked in his dry way of some foreign

Epigrams of Coolidge Are Here Recalled

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Some of the epigramatic statements made by former President Calvin Coolidge were as follows:

Men do not make laws. They do but discover them. Laws must be justified by something more than the will of the majority. They must rest on the eternal foundation of righteousness.

The state is most fortunate in its form of government which has the aptest instruments for the discovery of laws.

The latest, most modern and most nearly perfect system of government that statesmanship has devised is representative government. Its weakness is the weakness of us imperfect human beings who administer it. Its strength is that even such administration secures to the people more blessings than any other system ever produced. No nation has discarded it and retained liberty.

All that is needed is for us to give what we think America is worth.

The resources of our country are sufficient if we use them to help each other.

Promises and good intentions are not enough. We cannot afford rash experiments.

No great question has ever been decided by the people of this nation on the sole basis of dollars and cents.

When the times have called for a man some one has stood forth.

There is only one form of political strategy in which I have any confidence, and that is to try to do the right thing.

There is no right to strike against the public safety by anybody, anywhere, any time.

Irrespective of the third term policy, the presidential office is of such nature that it is difficult to conceive how one man can successfully serve the country for a term of more than eight years.

A President should not only not be selfish but he ought to avoid the appearance of selfishness. The people would not have confidence in a man that appeared to be grasping for office.

We draw our Presidents from the people. It is a wholesome thing for me to return to the people. I came from them. I wish to be one of them. I do not choose to run.

Dies Suddenly of Heart Attack.

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 5.—(Special.)—Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States, died about noon of a sudden heart attack in his dressing room in his modest estate, The Beeches. He was 60 years old.

His wife, Mrs. Grace Goodhue Coolidge, who had just returned from shopping, found the body when she went upstairs to call Mr. Coolidge for luncheon. He was lying on his back with a calm expression on his face as if he had died without pain or suffering. His coat and vest were off.

Complaining Several Days.

Mr. Coolidge had been complaining for several days of what he regarded as slight attacks of indigestion, but it was not known that he was suffering from heart disease. He underwent a periodic physical examination recently and no organic trouble was found at that time.

Mrs. Coolidge bore up bravely under the shock of the unexpected tragedy. She was alone when she found the body, but immediately summoned Harry Ross, the former President's secretary, who was in the house at the time.

Mr. Ross took charge at once. He telephoned to John Coolidge, the ex-President's son, at his office in New Haven, who motored here this afternoon with his wife, the former Florence Trumbull, daughter of former Gov. Trumbull of Connecticut.

Simple Services Planned.

In keeping with the unpretentiousness of Mr. Coolidge's nature and his life, Mrs. Coolidge decided that he would have preferred, if he had been able to express his opinion, funeral services of the utmost simplicity. Such will be their nature.

Instead of having the body taken to Washington or to Boston, to lie in state in the places where he exercised the power of government as President of the United States and previously as governor of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, Mrs. Coolidge ordered that her husband's body remain in his home in this city, where he lived before and after his presidential career.

The former President was at rest in his own bedroom tonight with a light in the room and no one present in the house except members of the family and the household.

Funeral on Saturday.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock on Saturday morning in the Edwards Congregational church on Main street in this city, a historic edifice named after Jonathan Edwards, the great divine, who lived here.

This is the church which the Coolidge family attends and where the former President worshiped only last Sunday.

Although it is understood here that many distinguished persons from New York, Washington, and elsewhere will come on for the funeral and that President Hoover will attend, the presence of these

Stage Crew Strike Stops Show in Loop

Six stage hands employed in the Garrick theater walked out at 8:15 o'clock last night and as a result "The Family Upstairs," a legitimate show which has been playing in the house for nearly two weeks, was forced to close.

Leonard Doyle, producer of the play, went before the curtain at 8:30 p. m. and told about 1,000 patrons that the show would be unable to go on and that money paid for tickets would be refunded at the box office. He explained that the stage hands' strike was called at the request of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, which has been unable to arrive at a contract with the theater.

Explains Labor Trouble.

An explanation of the theater-union trouble was given by Doyle and Raymond H. West, lessee of the theater. According to West, there was a contract between his predecessor, Warren Irons, and the union to employ five musicians whenever the house was open. The contract expired in September and was not renewed. The theater was dark from last May until Christmas day. "The Family Upstairs" was the first show there since West took over the theater.

"We have been trying to arrive at an arrangement with the musicians' union," West said. "This show does not need any music and we cannot afford to have any. However, the federation has refused to compromise in any way, demanding that we employ five men at a total cost of $500 a week, with Peter A. Vavallo as leader.

"We offered to engage one or two men to play in the lobby or to donate 25 per cent of the house profits to idle musicians. They turned down all propositions except the one they offered. We have been running without music since Christmas.

Men Told to Strike.

"Tonight Al Rackett, vice president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, and George E. Browne, business agent for the stage hands, went backstage together. Browne told his men to strike the sets and get out. They did this. 'We have only one set in the show and it is not changed. We don't need stage hands. But we have been paying them a total of $418 a week just to appear for duty.'

West said that damage suits would be started against both unions. It was added that the federal authorities would be asked to prosecute if the walkout came under the provisions of the laws against restraint of trade.

PASSENGER TRAIN CAUGHT IN ROCKY MOUNTAIN SNOW

Whitefish, Mont., Jan. 5.—(AP)—The Great Northern railway's Empire Builder, crack passenger train, was caught in a snowslide near Blacktail, Mont., in the Rocky mountains, today. Railroad reports said no one was injured. The engine and three cars were covered by the avalanche, but the train remained on the track.

The engineer, it was reported here, saw the enormous slide descending from a mountainside in time to apply the brakes and slow up the speeding train before nosing into the snow.

A wrecker sped to the scene from Whitefish and the task of extrication was begun. At 6:30 o'clock tonight the train west bound had not arrived here. It was due here at 2:55 p. m.

BINDS AND ROBS BETTY COMPSON OF $50,000 GEMS

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Police tonight reported a bandit disguised as a messenger carrier gained entrance to the palatial Hollywood home of Betty Compson, screen actress, and escaped with jewelry valued at between $50,000 and $60,000. The actress and E. D. Leshin, her ex-production manager, with whom she was playing cards, were both bound and gagged.

Dewey Heads Drive to Sell Tax Warrants

Charles S. Dewey, former financial adviser to the Polish government, was selected last night as chairman of the citizens' committee which will conduct the campaign to sell about $43,000,000 worth of 1932 city and board of education tax warrants to the public. Pay days for employes of both local governments depend on the success of the campaign.

Mr. Dewey was chosen to head the sales group at a dinner in the Drake hotel given by City Controller M. S. Szymczak and attended by most of the members of the citizens' committee on public expenditures. The committee's chairman, Fred W. Sargent, made the announcement of Mr. Dewey's appointment.

Aiding Mr. Dewey will be the following: Ernest R. Graham, John O. Rees, John Dennison of the Continental Illinois bank, Frank Gordon of the First National bank, Frank McNair of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, and George F. Spaulding of the Northern Trust company.

"This was just a meeting to pep these fellows up for the campaign," explained Mr. Sargent. "It will start Monday."

TEACHERS MAY LOSE JOBS

An indication that Supt. Bogan may dismiss a number of elementary school teachers to effect a reduction in the 79 million dollar school budget for 1933 was seen by school officials in a notice sent out last night to principals. Mr. Bogan requested the principals to send him information on the number of teachers and their pupils.

The data asked are for the first to the eighth grades inclusive, but do not include kindergarten, deaf, blind, subnormal, and other special divisions. The notice also asked for information regarding physical education teachers. Mr. Bogan declined to comment on the reason for the request, but admitted that it had to do with the budget.

The budget was received by the board of education from the business manager Wednesday and referred back to department heads for substantial reductions.

Man Who Marked Water Holes in Desert Dies at 82

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—George Whitwell Parsons, the man who originally sign-posted the deserts of the American southwest so that water holes could be found, died here early today after suffering from a chronic heart ailment. He was born in the District of Columbia 82 years ago and came west in 1876.

How Coolidge Was Sworn In by Lamplight

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

A drama of epic simplicity was the taking of the oath by Calvin Coolidge as President of the United States at 2:43 a. m., Aug. 3, 1923, in the parlor of the old Coolidge homestead at Plymouth Notch in the Vermont hills across the road from the house in which he was born.

The oath was administered by the President's father, John Calvin Coolidge, a Vermont notary, in the faint light of an old fashioned kerosene lamp, and the Bible used was an old family volume that was on the parlor table next to an ancient album filled mostly with tintypes. It was the first time in the history of the republic that a father installed his son as chief executive of the nation.

The new President repeated the oath after his father. He paused for a tense moment with hand still uplifted, and added in a voice deep with feeling:

"So help me God."

A small group that stood by in the parlor included Mrs. Coolidge and the family chauffeur, while friends and neighbors in the hamlet who had gathered at the news of the death of President Harding were grouped outside in the summer darkness and witnessed the ceremony through the open windows.

Routed from His Sleep.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge had been spending a three weeks' vacation at the family homestead and had retired for the night after receiving bulletins that President Harding was apparently improved. Then, about midnight, a neighbor with a telephone in his home received the news of President Harding's death and roused the Coolidge family from its slumber. A few miles away a party of newspaper men on their way to the Maine woods got the bulletin and set out in cars for the Coolidge home.

Mr. Coolidge was desirous of having his father, then 78 years old, administer the oath, but there was uncertainty as to whether the chief executive could be sworn in by other than a dignitaries will not affect the plans for services of the most simple and unostentatious character. The funeral sermon will be preached by the Rev. Albert J. Penner, pastor of the church, and there will be an organist and a choir.

Following the funeral services the body will be taken by automobile to Mr. Coolidge's birthplace, Plymouth, Vt., where the former President will be buried in the same old cemetery where his father lies, the father who administered the presidential oath of office to him in the Coolidge family home at Plymouth when President Harding died. His son, Calvin, who died in the White House, and his ancestors for generations back also lie buried there.

This charming college community was plunged into the deepest mourning. The public buildings, the Smith college buildings, and some of the private homes and business places were draped with black crêpe.

Meanwhile the grief of the nation and of the world flowed into this city tonight by telegraph and telephone as the news of the former President's death spread. Hundreds of telegrams of condolence poured into the Coolidge home. President and Mrs. Hoover, Chief Justice Hughes, and Alfred E. Smith were among the first to send messages.

Secretary Tells of Death.

The circumstances of Mr. Coolidge's death were related tonight by his secretary, Mr. Ross, in the law offices of Coolidge & Hemenway in the Masonic block at 25 Main street, where the former President spent this morning.

"Mr. Coolidge got up about the usual time, 7 o'clock," said Mr. Ross. "After he had breakfast his chauffeur, Joseph Bukosky, drove him down here to the office. He arrived as usual about 8:30 o'clock, and I met him here.

"He seemed to be all right during the morning and did not complain of anything at all today, although for some days past he had been complaining of slight attacks of indigestion. He did not call his physician for these attacks, but treated himself with household remedies.

"The only thing that I observed this morning at all unusual was that he seemed a little restless because there was not much with which to take up his time.

Follows Usual Routine.

"He had been feeling this way for a few weeks.

"He followed his usual routine this morning. He went over the morning correspondence, signed his outgoing mail, and read the morning newspapers.

"About 10 o'clock he said to me: 'Well, I guess we'll go up to the house.'

"We drove out to The Beeches and went into his study on the ground floor. Mrs. Coolidge was getting ready to go down town for her regular morning shopping. She came into the study and chatted with us a while. As she got up to go out the door without calling the car, Mr. Coolidge said: 'Don't you want to take the car?'

Talk About Boyhood Home.

"After Mrs. Coolidge left, Mr. Coolidge and I continued to chat. We did not talk about anything in particular, nothing at all about public questions.

"We both liked to talk about the place at Plymouth, and that was what we talked about this morning. The life there in the home of his ancestors was very close to Mr. Coolidge's heart.

"'I think,' he said this morning, 'that I shall spend as much time up there every year now as I did last year.'

"You know, he went to Plymouth before or about the first of July last summer and did not come back until Nov. 3.

"The reconstruction of the house has been completed, and he was looking forward, as he said, to spend four or five months there every year hereafter.

"We also reminisced about the partridge shooting we had had up there. Mr. Coolidge was a good shot, you know, and he liked partridge shooting.

Speaks of Hay Fever.

"There was also some talk about his hay fever, which he always gets in the summer, and which bothered him quite a bit last summer. A bad cold in July also knocked him out for a week or ten days, but he had completely recovered, and I would have said that he was in the best of health this morning.

"He also spoke of a jig-saw puzzle which had been sent to him as a New Year's gift from Springfield, and which the family had just worked out. I don't think he solved it himself, for he never was much interested in this sort of thing, but he told me about it. It was a picture of George Washington and his own name, Calvin Coolidge, was cut into the background, he took me to look at it yesterday and again today.

"During our talk in the study, which lasted for an hour to an hour and a half, Mr. Coolidge got up perhaps a dozen times, walked out of the room, and came back. He was always like that—restless, and liking to putter around. He did not seem to like sitting still for any length of time.

Leaves for Upstairs.

"About 11:30 o'clock he got up and went upstairs. I did not see or hear him again. Between 11:30 and 12 o'clock, however, he went down into the cellar, and the chauffeur and the gardener, Robert S. Smith, saw him there.

"He stopped and talked for a moment with Smith, who was stoking the furnace, and Smith fixes the time at 10 minutes to 12.

"I usually leave the house at 12 o'clock and drive downtown with the chauffeur for lunch, but Mr. Coolidge had not said he was through with me, so I waited in the study while the chauffeur waited downstairs.

"Mrs. Coolidge returned home from her shopping at about 12:25 o'clock. She went right upstairs without taking off her hat or coat. She was going to call Mr. Coolidge for luncheon. First, she looked in his bedroom and then across a little corridor, in his combination dressing room and bathroom. There she saw him lying on the floor. She immediately ran downstairs and called me from the study and I ran upstairs with her.

Found Lying on Floor.

"Mr. Coolidge was lying on his back on the floor, with his arms outstretched, and with a calm look upon his face.

"I sensed at once that he was dead; there was no sign that he had suffered any pain. His death must have come immediately and painlessly, judging by his appearance.

"He was in his shirt sleeves, having taken off his coat and vest, and we believe that he was preparing to shave before luncheon.

"I told Mrs. Coolidge that I had better call Dr. Brown [Dr. Edward W. Brown, the Coolidge family physician, who is also the medical examiner here] and ran downstairs to do so. Dr. Brown came in a few minutes, and pronounced Mr. Coolidge dead. He said that he had probably been dead about fifteen minutes before his body had been discovered, as closely as one could judge under the circumstances."

Son Is Summoned.

Mr. Ross then telephoned John Coolidge and to some close friends of the family and a little later notified local newspapermen.

The body remained for a while on the floor of the dressing room, but soon was placed in bed in the former President's bedroom.

Dr. Brown made the following statement tonight:

"There is no doubt that Mr. Coolidge died as the result of a sudden heart attack. The technical name for his fatal attack as it will appear upon the death certificate is coronary thrombosis—the bursting of the large artery entering the heart."

He said an autopsy had been discussed but that Mrs. Coolidge was opposed to it and that it would not be performed.

Dr. Brown also said that he had examined Mr. Coolidge about a month ago and had found nothing wrong with him organically at that time.

In the house at the time of Mr. Coolidge's death, besides Mrs. Coolidge, Mr. Ross, the chauffeur, and the gardener, were Miss Lillian Nelligan, maid, and Mrs. Bessie L. Bryson, cook.

Planned Trip to New York.

Mr. Coolidge was to have gone to New York next Tuesday for the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance company next Wednesday noon. Train reservations for this trip had already been made by Mr. Ross.

Mr. Ross said that Mr. Coolidge's only activities outside of the Northampton law office recently had been in connection with his position as director of the New York Life and his chairmanship of the national transportation commission—which also took him to New York on occasional visits for study of railway problems.

Mr. Ross said that Mrs. Coolidge was bearing up bravely tonight, and that she had shown fine fortitude in standing under the shock of the tragic news.

Cobbler Friend Grieved.

James Lucey, the aged Northampton cobbler to whom President Coolidge once wrote a letter from the White House, saying that if it had not been for the shoemaker the President would not then be in the White House, was heartbroken at the news. The old man stood in his shop, pipe in hand, arm resting on the counter, and recalled the days when he and Calvin Coolidge used to exchange their views upon life.

"I'm sorry. I'm sorry. He was the best friend I ever had," said the cobbler of the President. "I've known him ever since November of the first year he went to Amherst college. My sympathy goes out to Mrs. Coolidge and their son, John."

Leading Uneventful Life.

The former President had been leading a quiet life since his return to Northampton after President Hoover succeeded him in the White House on March 4, 1929. His day to day program all that time varied little, except when he had some newspaper or magazine writing to do.

Upon his return from Washington in March, 1929, Mr. Coolidge moved back to the half of a small frame double house which he had rented and in which he had lived when he practiced law in Northampton and married Grace Goodhue, the school teacher, now Mrs. Coolidge, twenty-seven years ago.

Some time later, however, he bought the small estate, "The Beeches," with a rambling, two story frame house of fourteen rooms, and he and Mrs. Coolidge have lived there since.

Avoids Political Activity.

He had refrained from any active participation in political affairs, even in his home state. Only a few days ago an effort to get an expression of his views toward the selection of a Republican state chairman in Massachusetts brought a reply from his secretary that he was not well enough informed to make any suggestion.

He did make two speeches in behalf of President Hoover in the recent campaign, one over the radio and one in Madison Square Garden, New York.

He was very much interested, however, in the railroad situation, as brought out by the testimony before the national transportation commission, and was hopeful that a constructive solution of the problem would result from these meetings over which he presided.

EIGHT COMMANDMENTS OF PUBLIC SERVICE AS WRITTEN BY COOLIDGE

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—What have been described as Mr. Coolidge's eight commandments of public service were contained in a message which he had addressed as governor to the legislature of Massachusetts. They follow:

"Do the day's work.

"If it be to protect the rights of the weak, whoever objects, do it.

"If it be to help a powerful corporation the better to serve the people, whatever the opposition, do that.

"Expect to be called a standpatter, but don't be a standpatter.

"Expect to be called a demagogue, but don't be a demagogue.

"Don't hesitate to be as revolutionary as science.

"Don't hesitate to be as reactionary as the multiple.

U. S. Without Ex-President Second Time Since 1799

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—(AP)—The death of Calvin Coolidge leaves the nation without a living ex-President for the second time since George Washington died during the administration of John Adams. Adams was inaugurated in 1797, and Washington died two years later. There was another span of a few months between the death of Grover Cleveland and the inauguration of William Howard Taft, when Theodore Roosevelt became the living ex-President.

PUT U. S. FIRST, MRS. ROOSEVELT TELLS WOMEN

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President elect, expressed in an address at a dinner in the Women's City club tonight an apprehension that the United States may become "a selfish nation." After saying "We must think of our own people first," she added:

"We must think of ourselves as belonging to a family of nations, and that the good of all must be considered. We stand in danger of being a selfish nation."

Speaking as a teacher, she said:

"One thing that many of us hope for is that we may make the next generation a little more honest about what patriotism really is—that it means not merely believing your country is always right, but trying to make your country stand for what you believe is right. Patriotism is more than putting one's country on a pedestal and bringing up one's boys to be willing to die for it. I would not deprive the men who have died for our country of one bit of the honor we pay them. Their names will—and should—stand out in our country's history forever. But sometimes it's not half so hard to die for your country as it is to live for it."

"I think," she concluded, "the most valuable thing a boy or girl can take away from school these days is a sense of responsibility for what is happening in this country."

SENATOR JONES' ESTATE TO WIDOW WHILE SINGLE

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 5.—(AP)—The will of Senator Wesley L. Jones, filed for probate today, disclosed that he left the income of his half of the community estate to his widow, Minda, as long as she remains single.

On her death, Senator Jones' half of the estate will be shared equally by a son, Harry B. Jones of Seattle; a daughter, Hazel E. Jones of Yakima, Wash., and Beulah Faye Jones, his daughter-in-law, of Seattle.

federal judge. To settle the question Mr. Coolidge wrote a telegram to his secretary in Washington, Edward T. Clark, asking him to wire the form of oath of office. The message concluded with: "Find out if it can be administered to me by my father, who is a notary public."

Then arose the problem of getting action on the telegram. Plymouth has no telegraph office, and so complete was the isolation of the Coolidge home that it contained no telephone.

Hastily Installed Wires.

The newspaper visitors took the telegram to Woodstock, some twenty miles away, and likewise the Coolidge messages of condolence to the Harding family. From Woodstock a long distance call was at length put through to the White House. Discovery was made that telephone lines ran close to the Coolidge home, and a crew was sent posthaste to tap the wire and install a telephone in the Coolidge house.

Over this line contact was established with Washington and Mr. Coolidge talked directly with Charles Evans Hughes, then secretary of state. Secretary Hughes declared that the oath could be administered by the senior Coolidge if his commission as a Vermont notary public authorized him to administer oaths in Plymouth.

The form of oath was read over the telephone from Washington, a hasty transcript was typed off, and Mr. Coolidge, with his wife by his side, took his place opposite his father. His face was pale. His bearing was marked with the dignity and poise which characterized him throughout his incumbency of the White House.

The elder Coolidge, a rugged figure with similar immobility of feature as his son, asked him to raise his right hand, after which he read the oath prescribed by the constitution of the United States: "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of the United States."

The new President repeated the oath after his sire, and by every action indicated a prayerful mood in assuming the responsibilities. The parlor, a plainly furnished room, was dimly illuminated by the old fashioned kerosene lamp with a fluted top chimney and etched sides.

In the adjoining room, which served as kitchen and dining room, all was set for breakfast. On the table were the homely dishes, on the back of the stove a kettle of potatoes, peeled for breakfast.

Visitors Marvel at the Setting.

When asked by one of the newspaper men whether any particular sentiment was attached to the Bible that had been used, the President picked up a small volume, well worn, and said, "No; it was this Bible that happened to be on the table."

It was a volume much used by the President's stepmother, who was a deeply religious woman. It contained no family records. By its side on the parlor table reposed an old family album, filled with old portraits, mostly tintypes. Visitors who began flocking in marveled at the setting for the ceremony, its rugged, almost primitive, simplicity.

Soon after the oath was administered the President retired for a brief sleep, but his father kept vigil. About 6 o'clock President Coolidge arose and went to his accustomed place at the sink in the summer kitchen, where he shaved himself.

Shortly afterwards he entered the automobile for the thirty-five mile run to Rutland to catch the train for

Accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge, he arrived in Washington after an all day journey at 9:10 p. m., and, being welcomed by a somber official party, went to his old suite in the Willard hotel.

CONGRESS TALKS BREAK ALL PREVIOUS PRINTING RECORDS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Congress during the last year talked so much about economy and other matters that it broke all previous printing records, according to the annual report filed today by George H. Carter, public printer for the government. He said that the remarks of legislators with extensions in the appendix and petitions and memorials had run up the highest printing bill of the kind in the history of the government.

During the 72d congress covered by the report the size of the Congressional Record averaged ninety-four pages daily—the second highest on record. The cost, a new record, was $983,584. Much of the printed matter was referred to as "gross waste."

Mr. Carter recommended that henceforth the Record be confined to substantially a verbatim report of proceedings, as provided by law, since $200,000 annually could be saved if this were done.

The Carter report showed that in 1932 a total of 113,965 copies of eulogies to twenty-three deceased members were printed and bound, at a cost of $56,590. The $2,500,000 appropriation for public printing was exhausted three months before the end of the fiscal year. An additional $500,000 was voted.

COOLIDGE DEATH EVOKES SORROW FROM CAPITAL

Hoover Issues Proclamation to American People.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—News of the sudden death of former President Calvin Coolidge evoked from the national capital those marks of sorrow and tribute expressive of the place the thirtieth President held in the hearts of the American people.

President Hoover issued a proclamation to the people announcing the death of his immediate predecessor and eulogizing the man in whose cabinet he served.

The executive transmitted the intelligence officially to congress. Both houses adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Coolidge.

30 Day Period of Mourning.

As an expression of the public sorrow the President decreed a 30 day period of official mourning during which time the flags of the White House and of all department buildings will be flown at half staff. He also directed that suitable military and navy honors be rendered on the day of the funeral.

President and Mrs. Hoover will attend the funeral, leaving Washington tomorrow. Members of the cabinet and other representatives of the administrative branch of government and committees of the house and senate also will attend the service.

Hoover Informs Congress.

The President repaired at once to his office and dictated a message to congress announcing Mr. Coolidge's death.

The President then sent a private message of condolence to Mrs. Coolidge which was not made public. Mr. Hoover dictated the tribute to the character and ability of Mr. Coolidge which was incorporated in the proclamation to the people.

The period of official mourning decreed in the proclamation will have the effect of canceling White House social affairs for the next thirty days, including the dinner to the Vice President, scheduled for Jan. 12; the diplomatic dinner, Jan. 19; reception to members of the senate, Jan. 24; dinner to the chief justice and associate justices of the Supreme court, Jan. 26, and reception to members of the house, Feb. 2.

It is possible the cancellation will be extended to include the dinner to the speaker of the house, Feb. 9.

Senator Glass Informs Senate.

The senate adjourned before the President's message was received. Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] was speaking on the bank bill when Senator Claude A. Swanson [Dem., Va.] entered the chamber and whispered the news to his colleague. Senator Glass immediately suspended with the explanation that he had just been apprised "of the distressing fact" that former President Coolidge was dead. Senator James Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader, immediately moved adjournment, referring to Mr. Coolidge as "a very great man, a great American, and a great President." He said it was no time for eulogies, but he was sure "every heart has been touched by his death."

Await President's Message.

The house also heard the news unofficially, but was kept in session to await the President's message. As soon as the message was received and read the house, upon motion of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, adopted a resolution extolling Mr. Coolidge and directing the speaker to appoint a committee to represent the house at the funeral. As a further mark of respect the house adjourned.

Speaker Garner appointed the following committee to attend the funeral: Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], Bertrand H. Snell [Rep., N. Y.], Willis C. Hawley [Rep., Ore.], Andrew J. Montague [Dem., Va.], Allan T. Treadway [Rep., Mass.], George P. Darrow [Rep., Pa.], George Holden Tinkham [Rep., Mass.], Robert Luce [Rep., Mass.], Charles L. Underhill [Rep., Mass.], William P. Connery [Dem., Mass.], Ernest W. Gibson [Rep., Vt.], Arthur H. Greenwood [Dem., Ind.], John J. Douglass [Dem., Mass.], Lewis W. Douglas [Dem., Ariz.], John W. McCormack [Dem., Mass.], and William J. Granfield [Dem., Mass.].

Late in the afternoon E. T. Clark, who served as private secretary to President Coolidge, called at the White House and was closeted for some time with the President, Secretary Stimson, and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills.

A Letter from Coolidge.

Mr. Clark brought with him a letter he had received from Mr. Coolidge within the last few days. In the letter Mr. Coolidge said nothing about his health, but dwelt at considerable length on the grave problems of public policy in the troubled state of our country with which President Elect Roosevelt will be called upon to grapple at the very outset of his administration. Onerous as is the burden for any President, it will be doubly so for Mr. Roosevelt, said Mr. Coolidge. Mr. Clark declined to make public the text of the letter.

"This country has lost a faithful servant and I have lost a loyal friend," said Col. William Starling of the secret service squad which guards the President.

"Just this afternoon I received a letter written in his own hand. I am deeply grieved."

In the letter to Col. Starling Mr. Coolidge said: "I am tired and cannot seem to get rested. I know my work is done."

Doctor Startled by News.

Col. James F. Coupal, who was physician to President Coolidge was startled by the new news.

"Mr. Coolidge was always very rugged," he said. "He himself said he was in better physical condition when he left the White House than when he entered it. His blood pressure at that time was 135, which is rather low for a man of that age.

"The form of any heart lesion or disease which kills without warning is, of course, hard to detect. To the best of my knowledge, however, Mr. Coolidge had no symptoms of heart disease when he quit office."

Among politicians there was comment on the political significance of the death of Mr. Coolidge. He and Mr. Hoover were the foremost figures of the Republican party. Following the election in which Mr. Hoover suffered a defeat so disastrous as to disqualify him in the estimation of many Republicans for renomination in 1936 there was much talk of drafting Mr. Coolidge to lead the party in an effort to stage a comeback four years hence. The removal of Mr. Coolidge from the scene narrows the choice in 1936 to Mr. Hoover or one of the younger group of Republican leaders of which Representative elect James W. Wadsworth Jr. of New York and Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania are conspicuous members.

Officialdom paid high tribute to Mr. Coolidge. Said Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who served in the Coolidge cabinet as secretary of state:

"The country has sustained an irreparable loss in the death of Calvin Coolidge. His unimpeachable integrity, the extraordinary range of his political experience, and above all, his remarkable sagacity in dealing with public problems made him one of the nation's chief reserves—a national asset of inestimable value. For his long and successful labors in public office he had the best possible regard in the possession of the trust and confidence of the people to a degree rarely, if ever, equaled in the lives of American statesmen."

Other expressions were:

Secretary Mills:

"I have learned with grief of the death of President Coolidge under whom I had the honor to serve and for whom I had profound respect and affection. The country has lost a great statesman who devoted his life to public service, who as President throughout a difficult period of reconstruction guided the affairs of the nation with wisdom and judgment, and who as an administrator left what I trust may become a permanent tradition in the federal service."

Secretary Stimson:

"I have been greatly shocked and grieved at the news of Mr. Coolidge's death. His leadership in bringing the finances of the federal government, after the war period of necessarily lavish expenditures and inflation, back to a status of governmental economy and reduction of debts and taxes was one of the most important services ever rendered to this nation. As one who served in distant fields under his administration I found him a most thoughtful and considerate chief, who won my enduring loyalty and affection."

Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.]:

"The sane, experienced counsel of former President Coolidge will be sorely missed in the trying times through which America is passing. The nation has suffered a great loss, which falls alike upon all citizens, regardless of party, and which will be deplored universally by our people."

Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.]:

"Mr. Coolidge's death is a great loss to the nation. His calm wisdom and good judgment were invaluable in a time of great difficulty like the present. He was a great American, and will be affectionately remembered by his fellow countrymen, whom he served so well."

La Follette Pays Tribute.

Senator Robert M. La Follette [Rad., Wis.]:

Representative Fred A. Britten [Rep., Ill.]:

Representative Will R. Wood [Rep., Ind.]:

"It is such a shock that it is difficult to express myself. If the fact were known, it would not surprise me to learn that his untimely death was due to the exactions of the presidency."

Representative Earl C. Michener [Rep., Mich.]:

"There are very few Calvin Coolidges. Never was there a time in our history when a man of his type was needed more."

Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.]:

"He was a great man and a great American. When such a giant of the forest falls the vacant space is not filled for many years."

CITY'S LEADERS PAY TRIBUTE TO CALVIN COOLIDGE

Horner and Cermak Lead Praise of Ex-President.

Prominent Chicagoans joined yesterday in expressing their grief at Calvin Coolidge's death and in paying tribute to his qualities as a leader and a man. Some of the expressions follow:

Henry Horner, governor elect: "Mr. Coolidge was an able leader and one in whom the nation had great confidence. His unswerving devotion to the country endeared him in the hearts of the people. His death has deprived the United States of a helpful influence in national affairs."

Mayor Cermak: "He will go down in history as one of America's outstanding public personalities. He won my admiration for his honesty of purpose, his frank sincerity and his unusual sagacity."

Charles Gates Dawes, Vice President under Mr. Coolidge from 1925 to 1929: "The news comes to me as a great shock. It is an irreparable loss to the nation. I have not seen Mr. Coolidge since I returned from Europe last summer, but we always remained good friends and corresponded after he left the White House. Mrs. Dawes received a letter only yesterday from Mrs. Coolidge which mentioned nothing about Mr. Coolidge's illness. He will always be remembered as one of the country's greatest Presidents."

Charles S. Deneen, former senator from Illinois: "I am profoundly shocked and grieved to learn of Mr. Coolidge's untimely death. He had a high conception of public duty and public service. He gave his best to the public in every office he held. No man in the country was better versed in the science and art of government than he."

Roy O. West, secretary of the Republican national committee which managed Coolidge's 1924 presidential campaign and secretary of the interior under him: "Mr. Coolidge's courage, his modesty, his farsightedness, his interest in the common run of people, his ideas of economy, public and private, and his loyalty to his friends endeared him to all. While Mr. Coolidge was known as a silent man, yet with his intimate friends he conversed freely and with enthusiasm. His sense of quiet humor was highly developed and gave him a beautiful philosophy."

Alexander H. Legge, president of the International Harvester company, who served on the national transportation committee headed by Mr. Coolidge: "I am sad beyond expression. Why, I was with him as late as Dec. 9 in New York. He seemed healthy, cheerful, even jovial, and he made a few dry remarks, just like himself."

James Simpson, chairman of the board of the Commonwealth Edison company: "America has lost its most outstanding and valuable citizen. During the days preceding 1929, when frenzied finance was running rampant, he it was who kept his head and as President of the United States stood like the Rock of Gibraltar for the simple New England virtues of thrift and economy."

Silas H. Strawn, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce: "He will be remembered as one of our strongest and most representative Presidents. He was popular with all classes. Although no longer in public life, he exerted a tremendous influence upon the minds of our citizens for the maintenance of our government in accordance with the simple principles and high ideals of its founders."

George W. Dixon, president the Dixon Transfer company: "It was my privilege to know Mr. Coolidge for many years. I considered him one of the most foremost citizens and leaders not only in America but in the world. This will be more recognized as time goes on. I had numerous personal contacts with him and every time I was more impressed with his character. He was a quiet but deeply spiritual man. It is a tragedy that his death should occur at this time when America so sorely needs him."

Samuel Alschuler, senior judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals: "He was a man of eminently good sense and much force. He died all too young for the good of his country."

Charles E. Woodward, judge of the United States District court: "He was a steadying influence on the nation. By his simplicity of life as well as by his statesmanship he endeared himself to the nation."

John P. Barnes, judge of United States District court: "We people of the United States were fortunate that, in our time, we had Calvin Coolidge as one of our leaders. His counsel and example have been and will be an inspiration to us."

George W. Rossetter, president Chicago Association of Commerce: "He was one of the most prominent and sanest stabilizers of a restless country in recent years. His leadership and sincerity of purpose will be hard to replace."

A resolution of sympathy to the widow and members of the family of Mr. Coolidge was adopted unanimously by the city council.

HOOVER ORDERS U. S. MOURNING FOR COOLIDGE

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—(Special.)—A 30 day period of public mourning was proclaimed by President Hoover today as an expression of national sorrow over the death of former President Calvin Coolidge. During that time the flags flying over the White House and the several departmental buildings were ordered displayed at half staff. All White House social engagements were canceled for that 30 days. The proclamation follows:

It becomes my sad duty to announce officially the death of Calvin Coolidge, which occurred at his home in the city of Northampton, Mass., on the 5th day of January, 1933, at 12:25 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Coolidge had devoted his entire life to the public service, and his steady progress from councilman to mayor of Northampton and thence upward as member of the state senate of Massachusetts, lieutenant governor and governor of Massachusetts to Vice President and President of the United States stands as a conspicuous memorial to his private and public virtues, his outstanding ability, and his devotion to the public welfare.

His name had become in his own lifetime a synonym for sagacity and wisdom, and his temperateness in speech and his orderly deliberation in action bespoke the profound sense of responsibility which guided his conduct of the public business.

From the American people he evoked an extraordinary warmth of affectionate response to his salient and characteristic personality. He earned and enjoyed their confidence in the highest degree. To millions of our people his death will come as a personal sorrow as well as a public loss.

As an expression of the public sorrow it is ordered that the flags of the White House and of the several departmental buildings be displayed at half staff for a period of thirty days, and that suitable military and naval honors under orders of the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy may be rendered on the day of the funeral.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

HERBERT HOOVER.

LIFE OF COOLIDGE A REFLECTION OF HIS NATIVE HILLS

Vermont Upbringing Key to Character.

problem that was pending. At the close of the conference he said:

"If you gentlemen will return at 12 o'clock I will have something for you."

No Hint of Import.

Nothing else. No inkling of its nature. No one even guessed remotely what he had in mind, although a dozen or more experienced political reporters were on hand. Mr. Coolidge play no favorites in the news field. He had a keen sense of publicity values and the making of a newspaper story. He thought out the effects of things long before he acted.

Everett Sanders, the President's secretary, was called into the office shortly after this. He was given a memorandum on which the President had written with his own hand:

"I do not choose to run for President in 1928."

This was the first information Mr. Sanders had had on the subject. He was instructed to have a certain number of copies made, not on carbon, but all on one sheet of paper, merely the repetition of this sentence and nothing else. When this had been done the President took his scissors and cut the paper into neat strips, each one containing the precious sentence.

Hands Slips to Reporters.

At 12 o'clock sharp, which was after the closing of the New York stock market, the reporters were herded into the room. Secret service agents were instructed to guard the door and permit no one to leave or enter.

"Now, if you will pass this way I will hand you each a paper," said the President. The reporters fell in line and walked past Mr. Coolidge. He was very pale and stern. The first reporter to receive his slip made a hurried move for the door, but it was barred until the last one had been served.

"Is there any comment, Mr. President?" asked a reporter.

"Nothing more to say," was the reply.

Then the doors were opened and the rush for telegraph rooms and telephones began, and the nation and the world served with this astonishing and cryptic bit of information.

Starts Political Controversy.

It began a controversy which lasted until the nomination of Mr. Hoover as to whether the President really meant what he said or whether he had left the door open to a draft by the convention. Those who were closest to Mr. Coolidge and had studied his character, and particularly those who knew the New England character, of which he was an expression, as a piece of flint expresses the mountain from which it is chipped, never doubted the simple meaning of his words.

On that day he left the world to speculate and went home to tell his wife about it. She had already heard it from a senator who happened to go to the lodge for lunch that day and had heard the big news from town.

Mr. Coolidge followed this later by a letter to the Republican national committee the following December in which he stated that he had eliminated himself entirely from the presidential race and advised them to set about "the serious task of selecting another candidate."

Sends Word to Convention.

When the national convention met in June he sent Mr. Sanders to Kansas City to instruct several leaders of state delegations not to vote for him.

"Had I not done so," he wrote later, "I am told I should have been nominated."

Mr. Hoover and his secretary, George Akerson, were among those who were convinced of the President's sincerity early in the summer of 1927. Mr. Hoover as secretary of commerce could make no move toward the nomination or permit his friends to move until Mr. Coolidge had eliminated himself. Soon after a visit to the Black hills by Mr. Hoover the California contingent went openly to work for him.

Born on Independence Day.

Calvin Coolidge was born on July 4, 1872, in Plymouth, a village of half a dozen houses, in the Vermont hills. He was the son of John C. and Victoria Moor Coolidge. His ancestry has been traced back through early colonial days in Massachusetts and the England of William the Conqueror to the city of Avranches in Normandy.

The genealogy reaches John Coolidge who came to New England in 1630 with his wife, Mary, settling in Watertown, Mass. It goes down through Simon and Obadiah and Josiah to another John, who was born in Bolton in 1756. He was at the siege of Boston and at Bunker Hill and served in the Rhode Island expedition, settling in Plymouth in 1778 and leaving five children, the eldest Calvin, great-great-grandfather of the thirtieth President.

The President's own father was the man who had the greatest molding influence on his life. Col. John Calvin Coolidge was a citizen in his own right and the making of his son as President did not seem to add or detract a bit from his firm character.

His home at the crest of the old Notch road at Plymouth, where the President was born, was on land cleared by his great-grandfather in the latter part of the eighteenth century. He lived in utter simplicity and integrity, a man of pride and dignity. From him Calvin inherited his Republicanism as well as more homely virtues of thrift and hard work and honesty.

Four generations had toiled for a living on this thin mountain soil before the last was moved out into the political world. The old farm remained the same. Stone fences, gleaned from stony fields, marked off the hayfields and the pastures. The attic in the house was just as Grandmother Coolidge had left it. A four poster made up under the eaves. An old spinning wheel, a loom and a churn, a tallow lantern, and hickory chairs.

It all led into the mental background of the President, the simple, undaunted, hard working, God fearing human stuff which had carved out America. Calvin Coolidge with his silence, his terse comments, his humor, his shrewdness, his sound common sense, was a type as natural to this soil and race as the golden rod that grows by the roadside. Its very simplicity defeats opposition. Given a set of circumstances and you can always tell what a Coolidge will do.

There is an old pewter teapot in the home which belonged to Mr. Coolidge's mother. One day, when a boy, Calvin asked his father for a penny to buy a stick of candy. This was an uncertain year politically and Col. Coolidge refused, saying that possibly a Democrat would be elected and it behooved every man to be especially frugal in the hard times which would result.

Later, when a Republican was elected, Col. Coolidge went to the teapot and extracted a penny for his son. It is no wonder that during his political life the son remained a regular Republican and could write with utmost sincerity of the virtues of that great party.

Mercantile Experience, Too.

Col. Coolidge kept a small general store at Plymouth as well as his farm. Calvin, therefore, had a sound training in plowing and milking and other farm work as well as selling and accounting. Between chores on the farm and in the store he attended the school at Plymouth, a single room with a wood stove. Then he went to the Black River academy at Ludlow and the academy at St. Johnsburg, and finally Amherst college.

"What kind of a boy was Calvin?" said Col. Coolidge once in an interview. "Well, pretty much the same as the man he is today. [He was then President.] Quiet, thoughtful, rather shy, and very good. His mother died when he was 13. I kept store across the road. Whenever I'd have to go to town I'd tell Calvin what needed to be done at home. That was all that was ever said. When I came back I'd say, 'Calvin, was the horse fed?' 'Yes,' he'd say. There wasn't much conversation wasted. We understood each other. He did all that was asked of him and never complained.

"He wasn't much to look at in size, but I always felt he could hold his own against any boy his age. What the other fellow had in extra weight Calvin had in brain. Not that he was brilliant, but he was a good thinker. He could see exactly where the weak spot lay in a situation and go at it in his quiet way. He never made a noise about anything. You couldn't tell by looking at him that he was especially happy. He seemed very fearful of expressing any feeling.

Not Outstanding in School.

"When he was at Amherst he didn't stand out especially in any one activity. He was not a brilliant talker. He has a dry humor all his own. But he was made class orator and won a prize for an essay on the causes of the American revolution.

"The day after Calvin got home from college after graduation he received an offer from Judge Hammond of the law firm of Hammond & Field of Northampton, Mass., inviting him to come and read law with him. I don't know that he ever thought much of being a lawyer.

"He never spoke much about being anything. I asked him once what he was studying for in college, and he said he guessed all he wanted from college was an education. He wasn't enthusiastic about the law, but said he'd try it. He didn't work especially hard at the law, but a year and a half after he had been with the firm he took the examinations and passed. He opened an office for himself in Northampton soon after. He was 24 at the time. He was always a great hand at reading."

Mr. Coolidge did not spend much time at the law, for less than four years after he left college he became a member of the common council of Northampton. This was in 1899, and after that he was never out of public office until he retired from the presidency. He served two years as city solicitor and next was appointed city clerk.

The next event in his life was his marriage. While he was getting his foothold in the law he met Miss Grace Goodhue, then a teacher of the blind in Northampton. He made frequent calls at her boarding house, took her skating and on parties, and there developed an understanding between them, but it was not until the following summer, when Miss Goodhue had returned to her home in Burlington, Vt., that Mr. Coolidge got up courage to act.

One morning, it is related, he appeared at the Goodhue home. Mrs. Elmira Goodhue, Grace's mother, opened the door and asked him into the front room. She said Grace had gone downtown, but would be home soon. Then, as she was busy, she asked her husband to entertain the young man until Grace's return. Calvin greeted Mr. Goodhue, but said little. Finally Mr. Goodhue said politely:

"Up here on a little legal business, Mr. Coolidge?"

"No," responded the young man, "came up here to get married."

"Why," said the astonished father, "I hadn't heard a word about it. Grace didn't say anything to me or to her mother."

"No," said Calvin, "she doesn't know it yet."

Married in that Room.

It was in that same room, however, on Oct. 3, 1905, that Grace and Calvin were married. She was the vivacious opposite of the "Silent Cal" of legend. It was she who kept the social ball spinning on all occasions and made the presidential social contacts easy and pleasant. She remained the New England housewife, however, doing much of her own shopping and keeping a careful account of expenditures.

A year after his marriage he was elected to the Massachusetts house of representatives and near the end of his second term was elected mayor of his home town. Two years later he was elected state senator, and near the end of this term was made president of the senate without opposition.

He was chosen for a second term as president of the senate. His forty-two word speech of acceptance on this occasion became a classic in the state. He used two phrases which came to be regarded as the vital part of his political creed. These were "Do the day's work" and "Be brief."

Becomes Bay State Governor.

In 1915 he was elected lieutenant governor of the state. He was reelected twice to this office and during his third term, in 1918, he was elected governor of the state.

Up to this time he was hardly known outside the state. The Boston police strike put him on the national political map. Even Woodrow Wilson, then active President, touring the west in a lost cause crusade for the league of nations, heard of the action of this governor of Massachusetts in this crisis and was thrilled by it.

This strike in 1919 left the city at the mercy of thieves and rioters. Gov. Coolidge, after having backed the police commission in the stand it had taken, finally called out the entire state National Guard to maintain law and order.

Whether this was the action that broke the strike or whether the governor was given credit due the police commission became a matter of controversy, but to the unthinking nation at large the governor became a hero and the following year he was reelected governor on a "law and order" slogan by the largest plurality ever given a candidate.

Becomes Presidential Timber.

After this he became presidential timber and friends such as Frank W. Stearns, Boston merchant, began to work for him quietly in the national field. Stearns had attended the 1916 convention, urging the name of Coolidge as the best dark horse candidate, but no one would listen to him them.

In the 1920 convention, however, he was made an unwilling contender. The late Senator Wlnthrop Murray Crane and James B. Reynolds put their influence behind Mr. Coolidge, but he knew that his time had not yet come and issued a statement announcing that he was not a candidate.

He received a few votes from New England during the presidential balloting and when this was over and the political leaders were trying to unite on a vice presidential candidate, after Senator Hiram Johnson had refused, the convention was swept into quick action by a delegate from Oregon who nominated Gov. Coolidge as the running mate of Harding.

As Vice President he not only presided over the senate, but due to an innovation by President Harding was invited to sit in on cabinet meetings on Tuesdays and Fridays. Mr. Coolidge availed himself of this and so was better prepared to assume the responsibility as chief executive which came to him at the death of President Harding in the Palace hotel in San Francisco on Aug. 3, 1923.

Takes Oath in Farm Home.

Mr. Coolidge was then on a visit at the ancestral homestead and became President in the old farmhouse under an oath administered by his father, who was a notary public.

Mr. Coolidge brought a steady hand to the affairs of state. He was cool and sure and silent. He listened a lot and acted with discretion. His first act was to announce that he would continue the policies of President Harding, but soon the greatest political scandal in many administrations broke over his head and he had to form policies of his own.

This was the revelation of graft and corruption brought about by the investigations into the Teapot Dome oil leases, the veterans' bureau, and the department of justice. Democratic senators were in the height of their glory. It seemed that nothing could save the tottering old Republican party.

But the people, sorrowing over Harding, ashamed of the weakness of his friends and the rapacity of the Ohio gang, turned to the character of President Coolidge with relief and a confidence that never wavered.

Refused to Be Stampeded.

The President never became panic stricken. In fact, he was too slow in action to suit the hotheads. His belief was that many tangles straightened themselves out if given time. He met each situation with cool deliberation, with reluctance, it was said by many, particularly in the matter of asking the resignation of Attorney General Harry M. Dougherty. He ordered prosecutions in the oil scandals.

The President's enemies said he should have known of many of those things from his experiences in the cabinet meetings, but this same observation was made against President Hoover and with little effect in either case. President Coolidge grew personally stronger as his party organization grew weaker. He faced a hostile congress, and prior to his nomination at the Cleveland convention in 1924 had little support from the constituted leaders of his party.

At this convention the President placed his fortunes in the hands of two personal friends, William M. Butler of Massachusetts and Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan. He had things his own way, being nominated on the first ballot. When it came to the vice presidency, however, his wishes were overridden. Frank O. Lowden refused to run as Vice President and the leaders refused to put Herbert Hoover on the ticket, selecting instead Charles G. Dawes.

Vetoes Veterans' Bonus.

Mr. Coolidge went to the country on the issue of economy in government. He had with great courage and in the face of demonstrations and threats vetoed the soldiers' bonus bill and the measure to increase the pay of postal employes. He made few speeches during the campaign, remaining in Washington and at Plymouth, while Mr. Dawes went on the stump.

He was given the Plymouth background. He went back home for a rest and put on overalls and went into the hayfield. He whittled and swapped yarns and had a good time on the porch of the farmhouse, while his political opponents talked themselves hoarse.

This was third party year and Senator La Follette was considered a dangerous candidate. There was talk of a close election and the decision being thrown into the electoral college. Mr. Coolidge was apparently undisturbed. He had made, he believed, a good sound American impression, and there was no danger. He did not talk much about prosperity, but about economy

Prosperity Wins for Him.

But the managers of the campaign had prosperity to speak for them and the talk of economy coming from a New England farm candidate was hardly needed. Mr. Coolidge may have seen farther ahead than any of the prosperity howlers. At any rate, it all worked in well together and the Coolidge-Dawes ticket received 15 million votes, nearly twice that given the Democrats and more than three times as great as Senator La Follette's total.

During the summer before the 1924 election their greatest sorrow came to the Coolidge family in the White House. Calvin Jr., then 16 years old, died after a long fight against blood poisoning caused by a blister on his foot. He died on July 7 as he whispered "Good-by mother—and father—don't worry." There was a sad journey to the family graveyard on a pine clad hillside near Plymouth, where thirteen Coolidges lie buried. The President and his wife and John, their remaining son, spent part of the summer there and Mrs. Coolidge was long in recovering from this blow.

In his inaugural address in 1925 President Coolidge still harped upon this strange word economy. He never spent any money himself unless he got a sound return for it, and unless he could afford it. That was his notion of the national way of spending.

The economic readjustments during his five and a half years in office included the reconstruction of public finances under the leadership of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the reduction of expenditures by something like two billion dollars, three tax reductions, the refunding of Liberty bonds, and the funding of the war debts owed by European nations.

Oppose McNary-Haugen Bill.

Legislation of importance which had the administration backing included the immigration restriction act, the Mississippi flood control act, alien property act, railroad mediation, White merchant marine act, the McFadden branch banking act, and the commercial aviation act.

He was under constant fire to approve the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill but refused to do so. He sought legislation to lease Muscle Shoals, a phase of his policy of keeping the government out of business, but failed in this. He failed to get a law dealing with the coal problem and to encourage railroad consolidation.

In foreign affairs the chief activity was in the adjustment of difficulties with Mexico, through the ambassadorship of Dwight Morrow, Amherst classmate of the President, and the backing of the Kellogg war renunciation treaties. The Dawes plan for war reparation was set up during his administration. The movement toward limitation of armaments continued with indifferent success.

Retires to Private Life.

Affairs at home and abroad were in good shape when he quietly stepped out of the picture in the spring of 1929.

There are many who think that Mr. Coolidge foresaw the troublesome times ahead or that he had friends who advised him well while keeping the remainder of the country in the dark. Mr. Coolidge probably had little idea of the oncoming economic troubles, as his mind was political. He foresaw a time of spending rather than saving, and thought that he had gone about as far as could be gone in that line. This at least was the political gossip in his circle at that time.

Goes Back to New England.

After he left the White House he did the most natural thing for him to do, went back to New England and opened a law office and took up reading constitutional law, writing articles and fishing in the summers. His father had died and left him the old farm. This was kept up in good shape and occasionally visited.

The old two apartment house where he had lived frugally with Mrs. Coolidge for many years was abandoned for a more pretentious home, one well within his income. It was known as The Beeches, the sort of a place a country gentleman could retire to in dignity. Particularly one who had been the President of the United States.

He wrote an autobiography and many magazine articles and for a time daily newspaper comment. He was urged to permit his name to be placed before the Republican national convention last June, but answered by the publication of an article in which he pledged support to Mr. Hoover and told his countrymen why they should do likewise.

On Insurance Board.

He made an occasional trip to New York to attend the meeting of an insurance company directorate with which he had become associated.

His public speeches were few, one of the most notable being that at Marion, O., where he accepted the Harding monument on behalf of the Harding Memorial association. He went to his law office every day and enjoyed his strolls around the spacious grounds of The Beeches.

Last September he accepted the chairmanship of the nonpartisan railroad commission which came to be known as the national transportation committee.

One of his other activities was that of honorary president of the American Foundation for the Blind. On the day before his death he conferred for more than an hour on this work with Charles B. Hayes, field director. Mr. Hayes said that Mr. Coolidge was in an exceptionally jolly mood. He quoted Mr. Coolidge as saying during their chat:

"There is one thing you must do before you can succeed at any enterprise. Map out a policy and follow it. You can't please everybody; don't try."

Stories of Coolidge Humor Are Recalled in Washington

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Many a choice example of Calvin Coolidge's dry humor lingers in the whispering galleries of Washington.

Some of the stories are of the class just along the border line between gossip and established truth. Doubtless most of them are true, but the solemn New Englander himself never took the trouble to deny a one of them.

Perhaps the gem of them all, much repeated because it played directly on the universal theme of Mr. Coolidge's silence, related to a young lady who was having her dinner at the White House.

Seated next to the President, she opened the conversation with this:

"I have been told you are the most silent of men. But I made a bet before I came here that I could make you say more than two words during dinner."

"You lose," was the two syllable reply.

Another which became a classic, doubtless because it dealt with that other Coolidge trait—thrift—had to do with a caller who said:

"I have one favor to ask. I am a collector of cigar bands. One of my ambitions is to have one of yours."

Twitted about this long afterwards, Mr. Coolidge's comment was:

"Well, that's what he asked for, wasn't it?"

Secret service men were the butts of many of Mr. Coolidge's jokes and they liked it. One of their prize stories tells of the necessity for moving the White House alarm button to hide it from the then President.

He had a quaint habit when all was quiet of stepping from his office, pushing the button, and disappearing. It brought all guards on duty.

After this had happened several times, the bell was quietly moved without telling the President, and his fun ended.

Another time they tell of him walking from his office to go riding, and as he approached the door the large, uniformed guard turned to face him. Simultaneously the President's car rolled quietly to the door without the guard seeing it.

"Have you seen my car?" the President asked.

"No, sir, but I will call it immediately," was the reply.

"Please do," Mr. Coolidge said as he walked by, climbed in the waiting machine and rode away. The sponsor of that story says the President chuckled for blocks.

From the Black hills comes another of the drolleries. Mr. Coolidge was presented with a bushel of potatoes. To an elderly Negro he commented that there were a lot of black specks on them and suggested that they be cleaned off.

To the protests of the Negro he explained that Vermont potatoes didn't have those black eyes and they should come off.

Willing to please the President at any cost, the impressed Negro started rubbing, and after watching him for some time Mr. Coolidge strolled away smiling.

Another:

Mr. Coolidge was trapshooting in the Shenandoah valley. Col. E. W. Starling of the secret service was busy examining his firearms. After each shot the President would hand his gun to Starling and receive from him another which the secret service agent had thoroughly inspected and loaded himself. Each time Starling would break the shotgun at the breach and look through the barrels. Coolidge watched this, silent at first and later with a smile playing at the corners of his mouth. Finally when Starling had peered longer than usual through the weapon Mr. Coolidge asked:

"Find a hole there, colonel?"

Washington newspaper men recall with consternation and gratitude a visit which Mr. Coolidge paid, unheralded, to the White House press room a few months before his retirement from office.

The purpose of the call was an inspection of the room preparatory to drawing up estimates for enlarging it and making it more comfortable for the newspaper men.

He found one reporter sound asleep, chair tilted against the wall. Two others were playing chess and another was bawling out his office with the language customary to such moments.

With an eye on the drowsy reporter Mr. Coolidge remarked:

"Well, it seems comfortable enough here."

Nevertheless, he recommended the contemplated improvements and now the White House correspondents have a fine, spacious chamber at their disposal.

His inclination to hark back to the homely things and express himself in the language of the ordinary man, even when he himself was a conspicuous figure in events, lingered in the last remark he was heard to make in Washington on the day he left the White House.

Rain had drenched the crowds at th Hoover inauguration. It persisted as the retiring President and Mrs. Coolidge entered their train at Union station, bound for Northampton. Looking out through the spray-streaked windows of his coach, he said to his wife:

RECALL OFFICIAL VISITS COOLIDGE MADE TO CHICAGO

Calvin Coolidge made two official visits to Chicago as President of the United States. He sought the support of the middle western farm bloc on each visit, the first being to the International Live Stock exposition on Dec. 4, 1924, and the second to a meeting of the American Federation of Farm Bureaus on Dec. 7, 1925.

Regarded at the time as a typical Coolidge gesture, the visit in 1924 was made with unusual simplicity. The President and his wife traveled in an ordinary Pullman car drawing room, refraining from the use of a special car, and reporters on the train noted that Mr. Coolidge ordered the $1.25 table d'hôte dinner in the dining room where they ate with the ordinary passengers.

First to greet the President and his wife was Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the Vice President elect. Gen. Dawes was at home ill. William E. Dever, then mayor, headed the reception committee. The President devoted himself to the problems of agriculture in a speech before the Commercial club and drove to the stock show, asking to be shown all the prize winners.

That night after a dinner of thick steaks in the Stockyards inn he addressed 500 stock growers on his favorite theme—economy.

"I can think of nothing that will help the farmer so much as economy in local and national governments," he said.

EDITORS DEPICT NATION'S VIEWS OF MR. COOLIDGE

Praised by Many for His Quiet Conservatism.

Newspapers throughout the nation joined in commenting on the death of former President Calvin Coolidge. Some of the excerpts follow:

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION—Calvin Coolidge was a unique figure, possessing public confidence in his sincerity and uprightness to a degree given to but few men. His death removes one of the ablest and most soundly constructive of leaders.

BIRMINGHAM AGE HERALD—Despite all that has happened to deflate his policies, the simple virtues of Calvin Coolidge embodied in a personality so wryly reticent served to keep him secure in the respect if not the affection of Americans.

CHARLESTON NEWS AND COURIER—Mr. Coolidge was a small city lawyer who gave his life to clean politics and enjoyed it. He was a conformist to the older American habit. With the whimsical humor of the native Vermonter and a rich endowment of the commen sense needed to deal with things as he found them, his decisions were prompt and, seeing at no great distances, he saw clearly.

CINCINNATI INQUIRER—It was his peculiar service to enter the presidency at a time when a level head and sturdy spirit were imperatively needed. His long administration was illumined by these qualities, rarely achieving brilliance, but always lifted above the commonplace by distinctly American self-reliance and confident advance.

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER—He will not take rank among the few greatest American Presidents. He lacked the talent for warm personal friendships. But what was lacking in this respect was made up in a people's confidence. Americans knew they could rely on Coolidge to keep his head. He knew the value of words, and used them sparingly.

DENVER POST—The United States has lost one of its sanest, best, and most patriotic citizens. No President ever possessed that rarest of all qualities, plain common sense, in a greater degree.

DES MOINES REGISTER—On the side of major achievements, his advocacy of the Kellogg pact perhaps takes top place. We shall not be able to measure the importance of that for many years, it is likely.

DETROIT FREE PRESS—We can think of no man whose sudden and unexpected taking would be so great a shock to all sorts and conditions of people.

HARTFORD COURANT—He was no child of fortune. If the element of luck may seem to have entered at various stages into his career it was not in reality luck at all. His rise from one position of trust to another was due to a fitting recognition of industry, integrity, and capacity to do well and without fuss whatever he undertook.

INDIANAPOLIS STAR—There probably has not been a President, with the exception of Lincoln, who was closer to the people.

LOS ANGELES TIMES—It is too early to anticipate the verdict of history upon either Coolidge or his administration; but it does seem probable that the future will regard him as a man who was wiser than his generation.

LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL—His individual convictions were fearlessly maintained when there was need of fearless maintenance. His record affects his countrymen with regret at the loss of so sane, sagacious and stanch a fellow citizen.

NEW ORLEANS TIMES-PICAYUNE—All Americans mourn the passing of this son of New England who took the American view of all public questions, who dared to challenge popular trends he considered unsound, and who could not be swept from the path of his own sincere conviction.

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS—He was possibly the most admired and respected man in our present day public life. He won that by his shrewdness, his New England wit and taciturnity, and his refusal to accept renomination when he could have had it almost for the asking.

NEW YORK TIMES—His countrymen love to recall the qualities which made him unique, though in all essential political convictions and hopes for his native land he was quite one with themselves.

PITTSBURGH POST-GAZETTE—Probably no other President was as personally popular with all classes of his fellow citizens. The greatness of his office never affected the simplicity of his ways, the directness of his manner, and every day common sense.

PORTLAND OREGONIAN—After the excitement of war and reconstruction the country wanted to settle down to quietude and business, and it wanted the government to do the same. Coolidge rose to every emergency and declared himself without verbal fireworks, then stood his ground.

RICHMOND TIMES DISPATCH—We are too near Calvin Coolidge properly to appraise him. It is probable, however, that history will set him down as a canny politician thrown into high place without accurate conception of the great problems which come to it.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE—This untimely end brings it home to us with force that none of our Presidents now long survive the tremendous strain of that great office. The draft on human reserves has been too great.

PLAN COOLIDGE MEMORIAL RITES IN CITY SCHOOLS

Memorial services in Chicago schools and churches were planned yesterday upon receipt of word that Calvin Coolidge was dead. William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, sent out bulletins to all principals, instructing them to prepare for ceremonies in the schools on Monday. The principals will speak and in some cases the students will participate.

"The passing of Calvin Coolidge is a loss to the cause of education, which he was ever foremost to advance," said Supt. Bogan.

Walter R. Mee, executive secretary of the Chicago Federation of Churches, said the suddenness of Mr. Coolidge's death found the clergy unprepared for city-wide memorial services under federation auspices. He said, however, that clergymen of all faiths had begun preparations for memorial services in the churches on Sunday.

Anthony Czarnecki, collector of customs, as custodian of the federal building ordered the building's flag at half mast upon hearing that the former President was dead. The flag will remain at half mast until after the funeral services and probably during the entire thirty day period of mourning proclaimed by President Hoover, he said. Flags were also at half mast on scores of other buildings in the city yesterday.

NATION'S GREAT PAY TRIBUTE TO CALVIN COOLIDGE

His Death Is Called Loss to Entire Country.

New York, Jan. 5. — [Special.] — Throughout the nation shocked exclamations today greeted the news of former President Coolidge's sudden death. Tributes came quickly from men in private and public life who knew and had worked with him or who admired the American qualities of the man. Most of the comments stressed the national loss at a time when the Coolidge attributes of calmness and clear thinking are needed.

In the stock exchange, rail shares dipped slightly on the flash of the news from Northampton, Mass., but stiffened quickly. Wall street has been looking to the national transportation commission, of which the former President was chairman, to find means of solving the railroad problem. The share market as a whole was quiet, with prices narrowly changed.

Roosevelt Expresses Sorrow.

At his home in East 65th street, President Elect Roosevelt spoke of "the nation's loss" in the sudden passing of Mr. Coolidge.

"I am inexpressibly shocked at the news of Mr. Coolidge's death," he said. "The nation suffered a great loss in his sudden and untimely passing.

"I shall never forget his generous and friendly telegram to me in 1920 when he defeated me for the vice presidency. The deepest sympathy of Mrs. Roosevelt and myself goes out to his family."

"I had a strong admiration for him," former Gov. Alfred E. Smith said this afternoon. "Since he left Washington I have been pleasantly associated with him. I am deeply shocked and grieved to hear of his death."

Comments of Other Leaders.

Other comments follow:

Dr. John Grier Hibben, president emeritus of Princeton university — I am very sorry indeed. I did not know Mr. Coolidge well, but I had met him and I feel a deep sense of loss. His death is a loss to the entire country. While Mr. Coolidge was President Princeton university sought to confer upon him the honorary degree of doctor of laws. I believe he made it a rule to decline such degrees during his term of office.

Bishop William T. Manning, New York — The news of President Coolidge's death is a great shock and will bring sorrow to our whole country. We have had few Presidents and few men who have been so truly respected and so loved and trusted as was Calvin Coolidge. His name will be held in honor and affection by all our people.

Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company — In the death of Calvin Coolidge we have lost a great citizen devoted to the welfare of our country. His common sense, intellectual honesty and high ideals earned for him the respect and admiration of all.

"An Irreparable Loss."

Owen D. Young, chairman, General Electric company—The death of Mr. Coolidge without preparatory warning comes as a great shock to the people of this nation and of the world. Heavy as the loss would be at any time, it is greater now when in many ways we need him most. His personality, so well known to all, stood as an antidote to many of our troubles.

It is not so much what he would have done, however great, as what he stood for in America that has been irreparably taken away.

Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman, Radio Corporation of America — The death of Calvin Coolidge, under existing circumstances, is a national tragedy. There is no one left who can be to our people exactly what he was. With his incorruptible simplicity and honesty, great common sense and political sagacity he personified what is best and most fundamental in American public life. We shall miss him sadly.

Elihu Root — I am shocked and grieved by the death of Mr. Coolidge. The public loss is irreparable. He had a penetrating intelligence, sound judgment, and a sense of proportion that went with his delightful humor, kindliness, firmness, great experience, and wisdom. He was a lovable and loyal friend.

Great Leader—Gen. Atterbury.

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad and former Republican national committeeman from Pennsylvania — I am greatly shocked at the news. Mr. Coolidge was one of our really great Presidents. Apart from his service in that high office, and both before and after his occupancy of the White House, he was recognized as among the most valuable citizens and public servants of his country.

Dr. John R. Mott, president of the world's alliance of the Young Men's Christian association — Mr. Coolidge was a passionate patriot. He combined an almost reverential regard for the evolution and achievements of the past life of the nation with an unshakable, inspiring, and contagious confidence in its future. He saw with steady eye our unsolved problems and applied unerring guiding principles to their solution. He was ever responsive to the visions and plans of the new generation. His life and example went ahead of his words.

Didn't Forget God—Cardinal Hayes.

Cardinal Patrick Hayes, archbishop of New York — The nation justly mourns the passing of Calvin Coolidge. Universal sorrow gives expression to our abiding faith in the chief executive who in his day served faithfully and ably. His memory is blessed because in exalted office he did not forget his God, loved his country, and was devoted to his fellow men.

Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors corporation — In the death of former President Calvin Coolidge I feel that the country has suffered a loss that is as great as it is sudden. Not only was he a wise and able President, but after retiring from public life he still continued to apply his wisdom and sound practical judgment in the service of his fellow countrymen in the quiet and efficient manner that was typical of this true American.

James Rowland Angell, president of Yale university—Calvin Coolidge will be sincerely mourned by hosts of his fellow countrymen who deeply admired his simple and rugged character. It is doubtful whether any American President every enjoyed wider popularity during his administration. His death is peculiarly unfortunate at a time when the country especially needs the stabilizing influence of sane and courageous leaders.

HOW HIS BIRTHPLACE HEARD THE NEWS OF DEATH OF COOLIDGE

Plymouth, Vt., Jan. 5. — (AP) — This little Vermont town, birthplace of Calvin Coolidge, today received with consternation news of the death of its most distinguished son.

Word of Mr. Coolidge's passing came here from the statehouse at Montpelier and passed rapidly among the residents who generally were at a loss to comment.

Allen Brown, who received the word, broke the news to Miss Aurora Pierce, housekeeper at the old Coolidge homestead, where Coolidge received the oath of office from his father, John Coolidge, in the light of an old kerosene lamp. She was deeply affected by the news.

Mr. Coolidge had spent much time in Plymouth since his retirement from the presidency. Last summer he stayed here until well into October and personally supervised at that time the construction of an addition to the house.

From the Coolidge homestead Brown took the news to the schoolhouse, where it was received by the teachers and pupils. Brown also informed Lynn Cady, who was in charge of the Coolidge farm property.

COOLIDGE AUTHOR OF POEM LAUDING HIS NATIVE STATE

New York, Dec. 5.—[Special.]—Like other Presidents, Calvin Coolidge was a poet, although writing poetry was not an occupation usually associated with his austere personality. He read the following original poem at Bennington, Vt., in 1928:

Vermont is a state I love.
I could not look
Upon the peaks
Of Ascutney, Killington,
Mansfield and Equinox
Without being moved
In a way that no other scene
Could move me!

It was there
That I first saw
The light of day;
Here I received my bride,
Here my dead lie,
Pillowed on the loving breast
Of our everlasting hills.

If the spirit of liberty
Should vanish in other parts
Of the union
And support of our institutions
Should languish,
If all could be replenished
From the generous store
Held by the people
Of this brave little state
Of Vermont.

COOLIDGE RAIL INQUIRY GROUP MOURNS DEATH

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The national transportation committee, which, under the chairmanship of Mr. Coolidge is investigating the situation of the railroads and transportation generally, issued the following statement through Bernard M. Baruch, vice chairman of the committee:

"The sudden death of Calvin Coolidge brings a shock to the country. It comes with peculiar poignancy to us, especially on account of our recent close association with him in the national transportation committee, to which he gave full measure of his great ability and his usual devotion to any public duty. Although all who were associated in this work had had occasional contact with him and knew of his great qualities of mind and heart, this recent and much closer association gave us an insight into a side of his character with which I think the public was not altogether familiar.

"His care of the more homely and personal associations of life was of a richness and depth that was not generally realized. The committee has completed its hearings and is approaching the end of the program laid out by him. It will carry on to a conclusion in the spirit in which he led it and in a manner which we all hope and believe would have had his full approval."

Davenport, Ia., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Two more auto deaths today brought Davenport's toll to five in as many days.

HOW OREGON PUT COOLIDGE IN NOMINATION

Portland, Ore., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Warren G. Harding had been nominated for the presidency on the tenth ballot in the crowded auditorium at Chicago in 1920 when the Oregon delegation to the national Republican convention took the step that placed Calvin Coolidge in line to become the thirtieth President.

After the candidacies of Gen. Leonard A. Wood, Frank O. Lowden, and Hiram Johnson had been checkmated, the Harding forces selected Senator Irving Lenroot of Wisconsin for the vice presidency. His name was put in nomination. The Oregon group was pledged to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and then turned to Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts. Judge Wallace McCamant of Portland climbed to a chair. He obtained recognition from Senator Lodge, permanent chairman, who believed he was arising to second Lenroot's nomination.

Instead, McCamant nominated Coolidge. His words were:

"When the Oregon delegation came here instructed by the people of our state to present to this convention as its candidate for the office of Vice President, a distinguished son of Massachusetts, he requested that we refrain from presenting his name.

"But there is another son of Massachusetts who has been much in the public in the last year, a man who is sterling in his Americanism and who stands for all that the Republican holds dear.

SENATE GROUP FAVORS SLASHES OF 36 MILLIONS

Would Cut Pay of Army and Navy, Too.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Legislation to save almost 36 million dollars a year in government costs was recommended today by the senate's special economy committee.

The committee advocated a 1 2/3 per cent cut in the pay of government employés in addition to the 8 1-3 per cent cut now in effect under the enforced furlough system. The new cut, like the old, would be levied on salaries and portions of salaries in excess of $1,000. The committee's decision, making a total cut of 10 per cent, marked a compromise with the recommendation of President Hoover that an 11 per cent cut be authorized.

Would Save 18 Millions.

According to Senator Hiram Bingham [Rep., Conn.], economy committee chairman, the new salary decrease will mean a saving of 18 millions a year.

The committee further recommended, however, that the cut be extended to army, navy, marine corps, and coast guard salaries, which would result in saving of an additional 10 millions.

Turning its attention to veterans' payments the economy group recommended a new section reducing by 10 per cent the amount of any pension allowed to any person on the pension roll of the veterans' administration and the amount of any compensation paid to any person receiving military or naval compensation under the war risk insurance act, the world war veterans' act, or under any special act of congress.

This cut would only apply where the pension or compensation is at a rate in excess of $1,000 a year, where the cut would not reduce the pension below $1,000. This cut on compensation allowances would affect 73,629 beneficiaries and would save $8,570,932.

The committee also recommended a broadening of the President's power to reorganize federal agencies and that the bureau of efficiency which is scheduled to cost $146,000 in the next fiscal year be abolished and its records turned over to the budget bureau.

Hits Hoover's Plan.

The house expenditures committee, in fact, today voted that President Hoover's recent reorganization plan be disapproved as the first step in carrying out the intention of the Democratic house leadership of saving reorganization for their own President.

Under the new law urged by the economy committee the action of both houses would be required to disapprove the presidential program.

From the apparent saving of slightly more than 36 million dollars another committee recommendation would deduct approximately 4 millions a year. It was advocated that automatic salary increases for length of service or through promotion be restored. They were stricken out of the appropriation bills at the last session.

The removal of the ban on automatic promotions would benefit principally the army and navy, certain groups in the postal service, and police and firemen in the District of Columbia who were deprived of these automatic promotions by the current law.

GRAVE TASKS CONFRONT U. S. AS 1933 OPENS

[Article three of a series presenting the country's costs and revenue.]

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Through the Reconstruction Finance corporation and emergency operations of the federal reserve system Uncle Sam saved the banks in the panic of 1931-'32 and now the banks are carrying Uncle Sam.

And Uncle Sam, with his budget unbalanced going on three years, has contrived to make the banks carry him by reserve bank manipulations of credit, which have produced a mild form of inflation.

How much longer the government can go on borrowing of the banks, how much longer the banks can absorb the stream of treasury obligations without adverse effect upon the values of government and other bonds and without retarding recovery from the depression are questions that are causing concern to many government officials and most bankers.

With the balancing of the budget not yet in sight and likely to be postponed until the next congress meets, it is apparent that the treasury will remain in the money market, borrowing more billions to meet expenses and the operations of the R. F. C. until next summer, if not longer. As a result of its borrowings to meet the deficits since July 1, 1930, the treasury now has a short term debt exceeding six billions of dollars, which probably will be more than 7 billions by the end of this fiscal year. The short term debt at present consists of 3½ billions of treasury notes, ranging in interest from 2⅛ to 3¼ per cent, and maturing variously up to 1937; 2 billions of certificates of indebtedness from 1¼ to 4 per cent, maturing this year, and 650 millions of treasury bills yielding less than 1 per cent, maturing this year.

Of the entire public debt, now about 21 billions, 28 per cent is held by the member banks of the federal reserve system, compared with 12 per cent prior to the depression. The federal reserve banks hold $1,851,000,000, member banks $6,750,000,000, all other banks and investors $12,240,000.

That the banks have purchased so large a volume of government securities yielding not more than 3¼ per cent, that the banks have oversubscribed from ten to twenty times the offerings of certificates yielding only ¾ of 1 per cent are cited by administration officials as striking evidence of the government, notwithstanding its unbalanced budget.

Actually, all that the enormous bank investment in government obligations demonstrates is that the banks are unwilling or unable to loan extensively to private capital and for the time being consider the government the least risky liquid investment. The corner of the depression may have been turned, as President Hoover again reported in his annual message, but as yet there is no great demand on the banks for loans. And the banks are taking no chances on tying up their funds in anything but the most liquid assets.

Moreover, the enormous purchases of governments by the banks was brought about by an operation in central banking unprecedented in this country. In the last year the federal reserve banks purchased in the open market more than one billion dollars' worth of government securities. The money released by this operation enabled the member banks to discharge their indebtedness to the federal reserve and eventually to amass excess reserves aggregating 600 millions of dollars.

The enormous excess reserves, created by the federal reserve operation, produced the abundance of liquid banking funds seeking employment. Inasmuch as excess reserves earn no interest, the banks sought to make this idle money work. The only available form of liquid investment was government securities. Hence they loaded up to the guards with all the treasury offerings.

DRYS GET SENATE GROUP TO MODIFY REPEAL MEASURE

Resolution Asks Congress to Regulate Saloon.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Dry opposition to outright repeal brought from the senate judiciary subcommittee today a modified resolution for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

By a vote of 4 to 1 the subcommittee reported to the full judiciary committee a resolution for submission to state legislatures containing federal protection for the dry states and retaining in congress the power to regulate the saloon.

Borah Only One Voting No.

Senator William E. Borah [Radical, Idaho] was the single member of the subcommittee to vote against the resolution and he reserved the right to oppose it on the floor. To his powers of persuasion and his reputation as a student of constitutional law was laid the chief responsibility for bringing out a resolution so loaded down with reservations.

The other members of the committee were Senators John J. Blaine [Wis., Rad.], chairman; Felix Herbert [Rep., R. I.], and Davis I. Walsh [Dem., Mass.], all pronounced wets; and C. C. Dill [Dem., Wash.], a wet convert.

Senator Blaine announced that when the resolution reached the senate he would oppose the clause giving congress power to regulate the saloon and Senator Walsh reserved the right to fight against ratification by convention.

Text of Resolution.

The text of the resolution, which will be considered by the full judiciary committee next Monday, is as follows:

"Resolved, by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled (two-thirds of each house concurring therein), That the following amendment is hereby proposed to the constitution of the United States, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states:

"Article XX.

"The eighteenth article of amendment of the constitution of the United States is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 1—The eighteenth amendment to the constitution is hereby repealed.

"Section 2—The transportation or importation into any state, territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited.

"Section 3—Congress shall have concurrent power to regulate or prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises where sold."

Question of Ratification.

Today's final decision in the subcommittee came on the question of ratification. The convention planks of both parties favored ratification by conventions in the various states, but the subcommittee reflected not only the arguments of dry proponents but reasons that have been raised by the wets themselves.

Some forty state legislatures will be in session during the first five months of 1933, so that ratification by legislatures might prove the speedier method. Also the question has been raised as to the constitutionality of various suggested methods of ratification by convention, in which the congress would determine how and when the conventions would be held.

Thirdly, with economy cutting so large a figure the fact that legislative ratification would be without cost to the federal government, while conventions would mean a huge cost, also is cutting a figure.

SEEK TO IDENTIFY BODY.

Police last night were seeking to identify the body of a blonde woman found early yesterday in a prairie at 98th street and Manistee avenue. It is believed she committed suicide. The only clew to her identity is a spectacle case stamped with the name "Hakans, Kansas City, Mo."

Glass Introduces Senate Bill Designed to Strengthen Banks

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The Glass banking bill started through the senate today with a bang befitting its controversial nature and the peppery character of Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], its author.

The diminutive senator, who passed his 75th birthday yesterday, fired the first shot at Senator Huey P. Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," whose hobby is statutory diffusion of wealth.

Without giving Senator Glass a chance to explain his measure, Senator Long loosed an amendment at the heart of the bill by proposing to limit its branch banking permission to branches within the city or town in which a national bank's main office was situated.

Glass in No Amiable Mood.

The Virginia senator, in no amiable mood, reminded the Louisiana radical that senate courtesy permitted the author of a bill a chance to tell what it contained.

"I have no doubt," he went on, "that the senator who has just spoken at length is quite accurate in his assumption that he knows more about the branch banking problem than does the senator from Virginia. I think it might shock the sensibilities of the senate to suggest that that senator does not know more about every problem that we have been called upon to consider than does the senator from Virginia or any other senator or group of senators. That is the impression that I get and therefore on that particular point there is no room for dispute."

Then Senator Glass launched into a vigorous defense of branch banking. He declared that unless a wide system of branch banking were adopted 470 banks would fail within a short time. In Illinois, he said, were thirty-three tottering banks which might be saved through absorption by a strong central bank.

Of the nearly 11,000 banks which have failed within the last dozen years 80 per cent had a capitalization of $25,000 or less, he asserted. He called such banks "pawn shops."

Choked with Worthless Securities.

"The laws of the controller's office," he said, "have not been applied now for nearly two years, and the office dare not apply them now because the best informed may not accurately conjecture what would be the result. So many banks have their portfolios choked with immobile and worthless investment securities; so many banks have been compelled to discard caution in order to accommodate commerce and industry; so many have failed and are now failing to write off losses incurred and worthless accounts that the office of the controller of the currency has been compelled almost to close its eyes to the situation."

"Monopoly," Senator Glass exclaimed. "Who are the monopolists? These little pawnshops that want to monopolize the credit facilities of their own communities. They want to erect by law a tariff wall against credit facilities coming into their provinces, to loan the business man, the merchant and manufacturers money upon reasonable terms. I defy anybody to examine the hearings of the last 32 years and show that anybody who wanted banking accommodations ever objected to a branch banking system."

The Glass banking bill embodies the ideas of the Virginia senator—co-author of the federal reserve act, and secretary of the treasury under Wilson, as to the means the central government should take to curb unhealthy speculation and fortify the country's banking structure for the protection of depositors.

The bill embodies the ideas of the senator, but in a form diluted by compromises forced by the banking fraternity, by pressure from within the federal reserve system and the treasury and by the persuasion of senatorial colleagues.

Encourage Branch Banking.

Despite the dilution the measure, to the preparation of which Senator Glass and his senate banking and currency subcommittee devoted two years of zealous study proposes changes which, if passed, will be epochal in American banking history.

Most important, perhaps, and certainly most controversial, as was proved today, is the provision seeking to encourage branch banking.

It is as a remedy for the comparative instability of American banks, by which nearly 5 billion dollars of depositors' money has been tied up, that Senator Glass in his bill proposes to give national banks with a capital of $500,000 or more the right to practice state-wide branch banking, and in some cases to cross state lines provided the branch is not more than 50 miles distant.

Another Important Factor.

Another important feature is the proposal to create a federal liquidating corporation which would have authority to purchase the assets of closed banks and so hasten their liquidation. Capital of the corporation would be supplied by 125 million dollars from the treasury and from assessments against member banks and the surpluses of federal reserve banks.

The bill also places restrictions on chain and group banking and brings holding companies under supervision.

It is the opinion of the senator from Virginia that federal reserve money was misused during the boom period in nourishing speculation. He seeks to limit such a use, to strengthen the provisions of the federal reserve act relating to control of credit, and to draw a sharp line between investment and commercial banking. He seeks to place the international relations of the federal reserve system where they cannot be reached by the blandishments of such foreign visitors as Sir Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

As a result of the part which he believes the federal reserve system played in the boom era Senator Glass proposes to give the federal reserve board new power to limit speculative credit. The board, for example, is given authority to withdraw credit facilities from any member bank which while obtaining 15 day advances from a federal reserve bank, and in spite of an official warning, increases its outstanding collateral loans.

FLEEING SPANISH NOBLES LAND IN FRENCH AFRICA

Exiles Use Foreign Flag in Escape.

MADRID, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Twenty-nine monarchist exiles who escaped last Sunday from the Spanish prison colony of Villa Cisneros on the sun-scorched west Africa coast, were reported today to have landed at Port Etienne, Mauritania, French West Africa.

The government learned that the group of Spanish nobles and military leaders who were banished to the lonely coast garrison four months ago made their getaway in a boat flying the French flag. The French ambassador is investigating to determine whether their extradition is possible.

The newspaper Ahora said relatives of the exiled group learned of their safe arrival. The Heraldo published an account of how it believed the party managed to escape.

Lieut. Cavannas, it said, led his aristocratic exile friends in a race every afternoon along the coast which is the edge of the Sahara desert. Last Sunday they raced further than usual to a spot where a Breton craft was waiting. They boarded the ship, and thus escaped unnoticed until the roll call was read at the camp later, the account said.

Among those who escaped were a son of the Duke Infantado and Alfonso Bourbon, a relative of former King Alfonso.

The most prominent members of the exile colony, apparently still at Villa Cisneros, are the duke of Seville, a cousin of the former king, and Gen José Sanjurjo, a hero of the Moroc can wars.

BOOST INCOME TAX IS DECISION OF DEMOCRATS

that a rider would be affixed to the appropriations bill under which President Elect Roosevelt, after his inauguration, will be given broad powers to effect economies by consolidation and elimination of bureaus upon his executive orders. Under this authority even if parts of the present program do not yield the expected revenue or if President Hoover should veto parts of the program Mr. Roosevelt would be given the opportunity to establish a balanced budget by more drastic reductions of federal expenditures.

The congressmen participating in the conference with the President elect were Senators Robinson, Key Pittman of Nevada, Cordell Hull of Tennessee, Joseph F. Byrnes of South Carolina, and Pat Harrison of Mississippi and Congressmen Garner, Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, John McDuffie of Alabama, James M. Collier of Mississippi, Sam Rayburn of Texas, and Joseph Byrns of Tennessee.

Hamstrung by Politics.

They were reported as convinced that congress is so hamstrung by political bonds as to be unable to effect on their initiative any drastic reductions in the army of pay rollers in bureaucratic Washington. The economies recommended by President Hoover, together with the 100 million promised at tonight's conference, is about all congress can be relied upon to put across, it was said, and any further savings, in the opinion of the Democratic leaders, can be accomplished only by a czarlike demonstration of power by the executive himself.

President Elect Roosevelt was supported on his end of tonight's conference by a group of his own advisers, including Prof. Raymond Moley, his economic expert; James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman; Frank C. Walker, Democratic national treasurer, and Col. Louis McHenry Howe, the President elect's personal adviser.

Mr. Garner was asked if the new income tax rates and exemptions would be applied to the 1932 incomes.

Repeal by Conventions.

"I can't say as to that now," he replied. "That will have to be decided later."

Asked if the Blaine resolution submitting the repeal of the 18th amendment was satisfactory to the conference, Senator Robinson said it was not; that the Democratic platform, which the conferees thought should be followed, provided for submission of the amendment to conventions in the several states, whereas the Blaine resolution puts it up to the legislatures.

Mr. Robinson's opinion was that a failure to adopt a prohibition repeal resolution would not necessitate a special session of congress next March if the tax measures and farm relief discussed at tonight's conference were passed.

TO SECRET SIX: "YOU FORGOT TO USE A DERBY HAT"

Courtney's Police Set Real Trap.

Asked for comment yesterday on the fireworks display staged by mousetrap detectives of the Secret Six in an unsuccessful attempt to catch an extortionist, State's Attorney Courtney would make only a single sarcastic remark.

He made it after he had described how Lieut. Frank Johnson of his own detective force had caught two young extortionists early yesterday. Disdaining the mousetrap, flashlight powder and dynamite which the Secret Six operatives used in vain in their efforts to catch the person who has been sending threatening letters to Solomon A. Smith, banker, Lieut. Johnson effected his arrests with a single piece of occult paraphernalia. He bought a derby hat.

Threat Is Sent Coal Man.

On Tuesday John J. Dunn, head of the coal company bearing his name at 51st and Federal streets, received a letter threatening that his office would be bombed and his coal yard set afire unless he paid $5,000 to the writer. He was directed to place the money in an abandoned truck standing near his office on Thursday evening.

He took the letter to the state's attorney. Capt. Daniel Gilbert, in charge of the state's attorney's detectives, looked over his force and selected Lieut. Johnson as the man most closely resembling Dunn. Lieut. Johnson, noting that Dunn wore a derby, bought one for himself. Wearing it and dressed in clothes resembling Dunn's, he placed a dummy package in the truck Thursday night, and then, in company with other detectives, sat down to watch it.

Boy Is Followed.

Early yesterday a boy, later identified as Dominick Miele, 14 years old, took the package. He was followed to his home at 5031 Federal street, where he turned the package over to James Blangman, 17 years old, who also lives there. The boys were arrested and Blangman confessed that he had written the letter to Dunn. He will be taken into the Boys' court today on a charge of extortion by threat. The younger boy was turned over to juvenile authorities.

"Did Lieut. Johnson have real money in that package?" State's Attorney Courtney was asked when he had finished describing the incident.

"What do you think we are, the Secret Six?" snapped the prosecutor.

Pearl Yushas, 22 years old, 2223 West 23d street, was shot in the ankle last night when she and her companion, Raymond Kapsa, 24 years old, 2217 South Kedzie avenue, resisted an attempt of two men to hold them up in Douglas park.

REDS ARE ROUTED AFTER AN ATTACK ON ROOSEVELT HOME

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—An abortive attempt by 500 communists and their sympathizers to stage a riot near the town house of President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, at 49 East 65th street, in which Mr. Roosevelt was conferring with Democratic congressional leaders, was put down tonight by flying police fists without the use of clubs.

The communists, demonstrating under the auspices of the Unemployed Council of Greater New York, maneuvered for 15 minutes under the eyes of 12 patrolmen and twenty detectives in an effort to get into the block bounding the Roosevelt house.

The police ordered the parade to disperse and a clash was on. Four communist "shock troopers" pounced from a flank sheltered by women upon an unsuspecting policeman. In a moment he was upset and at the bottom of a kicking, pommeling scrimmage. Detectives in the crowd rescued him at once and set after his attackers, but the throng of women, scratching and railing, covered their retreat.

ACCIDENTALLY SLAIN BY SON.

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Mrs. Signe Lindstrom, 58, of Brooklyn, was accidentally killed tonight by a shot fired from a pistol which her son, Patrolman Rolf Lindstrom, was reloading after having cleaned the weapon.

WET FEET
DRAFTS
RAW WINDS
STUFFY TRAINS

Often prove too much for people with low resistance!

Some people can't understand why they always come down with ills at this time of year.

They protect themselves against exposure. They're careful about wet feet and drafts. But they do little about their own physical condition.

To increase vitality, to improve physical stamina, certain factors are particularly needed—Vitamins A and D.

Formerly, to provide people with low resistance enough of these protective factors, physicians recommended taking good cod-liver oil regularly!

Now Vitamins A and D are much more easily available—in a pleasant-tasting concentrate—Squibb Adex Tablets-10 D!

The Vitamin A which Adex tablets contain helps to increase general resistance. Vitamin D is the essential sunshine vitamin.

Thus, people who take Adex daily will be helped through the damp, rainy season. Their well-being and comfort will be greatly increased.

Beware the Cough or Cold That Hangs On

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

POLICE HUNTING SCHILDHAUER'S WIDOW FOR QUIZ

Believe She Is Hiding in Suburban Town.

Police squads early today were seeking Mrs. Frances Schildhauer with the intention of questioning her as to a possible connection between her illicit romances and the slaying of her husband, Edwin O. Schildhauer, Austin High school bandmaster. Schildhauer was kidnaped and slain on the night of Dec. 10.

Mrs. Schildhauer was reported missing from her home shortly after Carl Bradberry, a former deputy sheriff, had signed a confession of intimacies with her. Supervising Police Captain John Stege, to whom Bradberry made the admissions, said the ex-deputy had denied any connection with the killing and would be released today unless Mrs. Schildhauer would talk about the case again.

Attorney Goes to Station.

Late last night Attorney George Crane, who announced that he had been retained by the widow and her father, George Birkinshaw, went to the Marquette police station and reported that he had not yet decided whether he would advise her to appear for questioning. When he was asked whether she would appear at the inquest, which is to be resumed today, Crane said he was not certain.

Capt. Stege retorted that unless she attended the inquest he would have a subpoena issued and see that it was served. The captain said that Mrs. Schildhauer, at a previous questioning, had been evasive in her answers—so much so that the investigation of the killing was hampered. She is believed to be hiding with friends in some suburban town. When detectives went to the apartment building at 3435 Fulton street yesterday they found Mrs. Schildhauer's apartment locked up.

Paul Palmer Questioned.

When Attorney Crane appeared at the police station last night he was accompanied by Attorney E. A. Kubitz, hitherto the only legal representative of the widow; Birkinshaw, the widow's father, and Paul Palmer, who was a boarder in the Birkinshaw home. Palmer was questioned about his knowledge of a Mr. and Mrs. John Carlson who formerly roomed at the Schildhauer home.

Detectives later went to a rooming house at 941 Belden avenue, where they had been told Carlson and his wife had moved. Fred Grace, proprietor of the rooming house, said the Carlsons had come there on Dec. 6, four days before Schildhauer was killed, and had moved out last Tuesday. The couple mentioned the killing, Grace said, but added they did not want to be questioned about it.

U. S. Prosecution Possible.

The possibility of prosecution by the government under the Mann act loomed as Mrs. Schildhauer went into hiding. United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green asked for the statements taken by police from witnesses regarding the six day visit of Mrs. Schildhauer and Bradberry to Memphis, Tenn., last October.

Bradberry, in making a confession of carrying on a secret romance with Mrs. Schildhauer, refused to sign the statement unless permitted to consult his attorney, Richard Isaacs. The attorney tried to bargain with Stege and make a promise of a signature to the confession in return for a promise that there would be no prosecution for violation of the Mann act. Stege refused to agree, and Bradberry signed the document anyway.

Bradberry spent two hours consulting the lawyer before he signed the confession. Then he spent an hour with his wife, Mrs. Eula Bradberry, who said that she knew he had had affairs with other women, but had not known of his romance with Mrs. Schildhauer. She expressed a positive belief that he was innocent of complicity in the killing of Schildhauer.

Details of Confession.

Bradberry promised to "tell a bookful" about Mrs. Schildhauer's affairs. Instead he gave several pages of confession full of his own friendship with the woman, who says she expects to become a mother in four months. Bradberry's confession, however, gave little that detectives considered helpful in bringing about a solution of the murder.

"Yes, I went with Mrs. Schildhauer to Memphis," Bradberry said. "We took a train on Oct. 21 and the tickets cost $15. Mrs. Schildhauer gave me $10 toward the expenses and we rode in a day coach, no sleeper. We went to a hotel in Memphis and registered as man and wife and came home after five days."

The confession contained details of a party which the Schildhauers and Bradberry attended shortly after Halloween. The former deputy denied any improprieties that night, when Schildhauer went home to find Bradberry dressed in Schildhauer's pajamas and Mrs. Schildhauer with a coat over her own negligée.

Go to Schildhauer Home.

Bradberry said he had been drinking that night and that Mrs. Schildhauer had been also. They had purposely separated from Schildhauer and Miss Charlotte Holland, a girl friend of the Schildhauers, at the dance, held at the Germania club, Bradberry said.

"We went to a balcony to hide away and talk while Capt. Schildhauer and Miss Holland danced," Bradberry said. "I became sick and Frances took me home with her and I went to bed, undressing and putting on Schildhauer's pajamas.

"The next thing I knew Schildhauer was pulling me out of bed and telling me to get out, that he was going to divorce his wife. He said she was man-crazy and that she would be an expensive luxury for two millionaires.

Tells About Quarrel.

"They had a fight and she slapped him in the face. He gave her some money and she left the apartment. I stayed a while and talked to Schildhauer, who didn't appear overly angry with me."

Stege questioned Bradberry regarding the possibility of Schildhauer applying for a divorce and naming Bradberry as co-respondent. Bradberry said he hadn't thought of it. His understanding, he said, was that Schildhauer had forgiven Frances because she couldn't control her emotions.

Bradberry was questioned about his political connections. He said he was sponsored for the position as deputy sheriff by former Ald. Michael Kenna, Democratic boss of the First ward, although he didn't live in Kenna's ward. He was personal bailiff for the late Judge Martin Isaacs, and after Isaacs' death was carried on the general roll of deputy sheriffs until Judge Francis Allegretti took office as Judge Isaacs' successor. Then Judge Allegretti appointed his own personal bailiff.

After that Bradberry said he worked occasionally as a guard in a south side gambling house. He denied having received this job through William Skidmore, whose name was mentioned as the present head of the south side policy game syndicate.

Probes Schildhauer's Finances.

Stege made inquiry yesterday into the financial affairs of the slain bandmaster. Schildhauer's salary as a school board employé was $2,850 a year and in addition to this he had a number of private music pupils who went to his home for lessons. From this source he earned $30 or $40 a week.

Schildhauer, who was 28, married Frances Birkinshaw, who is now 24, five years ago. His bank account was immediately merged with that of the Birkinshaw family, with Mrs. Birkinshaw the business and financial manager of the two families, according to the police. All Schildhauer's financial papers went into Mrs. Birkinshaw's safety deposit box.

"Schildhauer took out a new $15,000 double indemnity life insurance policy in 1931," Stege said. "It pays double for an accidental death, even a murder, as did his other policies, which make a total of $38,000 for a death by violence. The premium was nearly $800 a year on the last policy.

"In the event of a divorce Frances would have lost everything, as Schildhauer had proof against Frances to offer in a divorce case. The case has so many peculiar angles that we wish to make a very extensive investigation of the private life of Mrs. Schildhauer, and she should be willing to give us the opportunity."

"IGGY" VARECHA MUST DIE, IS COURT RULING

Darrow Loses Plea to Vacate Sentence.

Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court yesterday reaffirmed his decision that James (Iggy) Varecha, 17 years old, must die in the electric chair on Feb. 17. A motion that the sentence be vacated was overruled and the defense was given 30 days to perfect an appeal.

Varecha, confessed killer, robber, and rapist, was sentenced to death several weeks ago on a plea of guilty to the murder of Frank F. Jordan during an attempted robbery on Nov. 16.

Yesterday Attorney Clarence Darrow appeared before Judge Prystalski and asked leniency for the youthful killer. His argument was based on a petition signed by Attorney Joseph Nosek, who acted in behalf of Varecha during the murder trial. The document said that Varecha had been adjudged feeble minded in the Juvenile court and that he had no right to enter plea in the Criminal trial.

Discusses Mental Defectives.

"I am interested in this boy as I am interested in all unfortunate boys who fall into the hands of the courts through some act of their own or otherwise," Attorney Darrow said. He then launched into a discussion of mental defectives, declaring that every one is molded by environment and heredity. Both, he said, were bad in the case of the defendant.

"Varecha is a defective, a moron, and feeble minded," the attorney said. "The state has never executed any one so young. If this boy is executed the state may execute a younger boy next year and the year after that another still young. Then civilization will have taken a step backwards."

Attorney Darrow ended his argument with the plea that Varecha might be kept away from society by a punishment other than death. He argued that judges and jailers of the Juvenile court had known Varecha was dangerous and allowed him to go free.

Prosecutor Walker Butler answered for the state and termed the defense argument part of a "silly, illogical doctrine."

"When you strip down the argument of Attorney Darrow," he said, "it is nothing except a plea that no one is responsible for his creation. He says that heredity and environment make us what we are and excuse us. If that is true, then your honor—if he does a wrong—you or I or any one else might disclaim responsibility. The world would be chaos if we subscribed to such a silly, illogical doctrine."

Recalls Varecha's Record.

The prosecutor recited the record of Varecha as confessed by the defendant. It consists of 25 robberies, six shootings and the rape of two women.

"These were premeditated acts," he said, "not the result of the fact that his great grandfather was left handed. Should we say to our youthful criminals: 'Go on and commit your crimes till you are 21. If we catch you after that, it will be too bad.' What kind of logic is that?"

"The key to Mr. Darrow's argument is that he does not believe in the death penalty. We must disregard pretty theories and face the fact that the majority of crimes are committed by youths in and around the age of 17 years.

Stop Crime at Source.

"The time and place to stop these crimes is at the source. We must make an example of this defendant as a deterrent to others."

Judge Prystalski overruled the defense motion with the remark that the defense had failed to show any reason why the sentence should be changed.

Prosecutor Butler ended his career as an assistant state's attorney with the completion of the Varecha case yesterday. He is to join former State's Attorney John A. Swanson and former Assistant Prosecutors Homer A. Dodge and Wilkie Ham in private practice. Butler served under three state's attorneys, and made a record as a prosecutor of murder cases.

BREMEN ARRIVES AT NEW YORK, BATTERED BY 2 OCEAN STORMS

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The North German Lloyd liner Bremen arrived today with many notable passengers and a record of two storms, greater than any it had hitherto passed through, with waves roaring over the ship at a height of 82 feet, two feet higher than her own funnels.

The Bremen was two days late. She was forced to cut her speed from the usual 27 knots to 6.

Despite the battering of the seas and a wind that registered a force of 100 miles an hour, the Bremen came through without injury to herself or to passengers. John McCormack, the singer, said that in his fifty-three crossings this was the first storm he had experienced and that the commander, Leopold Ziegenbein, handled the ship so well that not even a dish was broken.

RESISTS POLICEMEN; SHOT.

James Ginsburg, proprietor of an alleged speakeasy at 1458 West 14th street, was shot in the right leg last night when he resisted Policemen Earl Gordin and Kinsie Britt, who were sent to close his place.

CHINA AND JAPAN RENEW FIGHTING AT SHANHAIKWAN

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 6.—(Friday.)—(AP)—Sino-Japanese hostilities were renewed, reports from Chingwangtao said, when Chinese and Japanese troops exchanged rifle fire today from opposite banks of the Tashih river, between that city and Shanhaikwan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 5.—Thousands of refugees from Shanhaikwan poured into Chinwangtao, Tientsin, and Peiping today relating stories of three days of desperate fighting within the walled city between the Japanese invaders and Chinese defenders. The fleeing Chinese reported that the casualties ran into the thousands.

The Canton government, which usually is at odds with the national government, today supported a Nanking demand that the Japanese troops withdraw from Shanhaikwan. If Japanese claims for attacking Shanhaikwan are to be taken for granted, the statement said, Tientsin and Peiping may expect similar attacks. Nanking also accuses the Japanese of staging an invasion contrary to their promises to the league of nations.

100,000 Flee Ruins.

About 100,000 refugees have fled the ruins of Shanhaikwan. Most of them went to Chinwangtao, to the southwest, on the coast. Others made their way to Tientsin and Peiping. They said that 1,200 soldiers and as many civilians were killed in the fighting, with 1,300 soldiers and 1,500 civilians wounded. Japanese official reports admitted only 18 killed and 89 wounded, while Chinese military advices from Chinwangtao said the Japanese lost 600 killed before they occupied Shanhaikwan.

The Independent Changhai Daily News today launched a bitter attack on Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, who was ousted as war lord of Manchuria when the Japanese began their military conquest in the fall of 1931. Recently he has been the Nanking government's overseer for North China.

The Daily News' attitude, which reflects a large section of prevailing public opinion, says:

"Marshal Chang will not fight. He should be dismissed and some one named who will. The loss of Shanhaikwan brings the realization that Japanese aggression toward China will continue until China submits unconditionally to the Japanese terms of settlement of the Manchurian and other Sino-Japanese problems. Does Marshal Chang expect persons of sound mind to believe his excuses concerning reinforcements and equipment at Shanhaikwan? Chang knew for months the Japanese would attack. He should have prepared."

Aimed at Chang's Report.

This article was aimed at Chang's report to the government in which he pleaded that "heavy odds, lack of time and equipment" prevented resistance to the Japanese. He asserted that the Japanese blew up the doors of their headquarters to give the semblance of provocation, blaming the Chinese for the bombing. The Japanese reply to this charge was one word—"Absurd!"

On the other hand, refugees lauded the defensive efforts of Gen. Ho Chukuo, a Cantonese, who commanded Chinese troops at Shanhaikwan "against overwhelming odds." Refugees also tell of a Chinese colonel, An Teh-hsin, a youth, who, with 300 men, repulsed two Japanese attacks on the south gate before his detachment was annihilated by a third assault.

The Nanking demand for the Japanese to withdraw was submitted to Akira Ariyoshi, Japanese minister to China. It asserted that China will reserve the right to claim indemnity for the Shanhaikwan attack and warns Tokio to prevent any further assault. The communication dwelt upon the grave possibilities of the Japanese troops remaining at Shanhaikwan, which places them in a position to descend on Tientsin, Peiping, and into Jehol province.

Reports from Shanhaikwan still are vague, relating that many houses are destroyed and hundreds of dead are lying in the streets from three days of artillery fire. Today it appeared that Japanese and Chinese forces were facing each other across the river a mile south of Shanhaikwan, but that both were holding their fire.

Stimson Gets Japan's Report.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—Again assuming the role he filled last summer during the initial Japanese offensives in Manchuria, Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese ambasador, today presented his country's side of the recent fighting at Shanhaikwan to the state department. The diplomat assured Secretary of State Stimson that the fighting had been precipitated by Chinese soldiers, adding that there would be no further hostilities unless Chinese troops again took the offensive.

Short of stature, compactly built, and with an all enveloping smile on his face, the Japanese diplomat told newspaper men all about his conference as soon as he had left the secretary's office.

"Japan"—he smiled broadly—"has no political designs south of the Great Wall. There will be no further fighting in that area now unless China again assumes the offensive. I have been informed by my government that the Shankaikwan affair is to be localized. Already some of the supporting troops have been withdrawn. The Chinese have retreated and everything is quiet. The fighting at Shanhaikwan was just a local incident."

$18,000,000 French Liner Destroyed by Fire

Towed Toward France

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Four tugs, two French, one British, and one Dutch, tonight were towing the burning hull of the French luxury liner, Atlantique, toward Havre. The liner caught afire in the English channel yesterday morning. The flames were diminishing tonight.

Th ship was drifting five miles off the English coast this afternoon when one of the tugs managed to get a line over the hull and began towing it toward Weymouth where it was intended to beach the wreck. French authorities ordered the tugs to tow the Atlantique to Havre. One of the reasons, it was reported, is that if the liner was beached on the English coast the British would be entitled to one-fourth of the salvage money.

At 10 o'clock tonight the tugs were off Swanage towing the ship in a southeasterly direction. It is expected that the tugs will reach Havre with the wreckage on Saturday. It was officially announced today that nineteen members of the crew of 228 perished in the disaster.

GOV. ROOSEVELT TO SEE STIMSON; TALK ON EUROPE

Seeks Data for His Regime.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—President Elect Roosevelt and Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson will confer shortly on American foreign policy. That was disclosed at the White House today. War debts, the forthcoming international economic conference, the Manchurian-Japanese situation, and disarmament will be among the subjects discussed.

Whether the meeting between the incoming President and the outgoing secretary of state would be a forerunner of a period of closer coöperation pending the inauguration of Mr. Roosevelt was not disclosed. The purpose of the meeting, it was indicated, was that of smoothing the transition of American foreign problems from one administration to another.

Seeks Information.

As far as could be learned in Washington, the Roosevelt-Stimson conference does not mean that the incoming President has any intention of coöperating with the Hoover administration on the handling of war debts or any of the other pressing problems. It is understood that arrangements will be made for coöperation in the arrangements for the world economic conference and possibly for the continuation of the disarmament discussions at Geneva.

While at the White House it was stated that Mr. Roosevelt had asked for the conference, it was reported in usually reliable sources that the meeting has been suggested indirectly by Secretary Stimson. It is known that the state secretary has been anxious to make arrangements for a discussion with Mr. Roosevelt at which he could outline the Hoover policies in detail and explain some of the factors leading to their adoption.

Defends Hoover Policies.

For the last several months, Secretary Stimson has been utilizing every opportunity to defend the Hoover policies in the Asiatic sphere in disarmament and in the handling of war debt problems. Reports have been that President Elect Roosevelt sees eye to eye with Mr. Stimson on matters of disarmament. It is also reported that the President elect is in general agreement with the administration's far eastern policies.

The Roosevelt-Stimson conference is generally regarded in capital circles as one of a number which the President elect has had and will have with key men in the Hoover administration prior to his inauguration.

For several weeks, Mr. Roosevelt has been summoning men to Albany and to Hyde Park for conferences on subjects in which he is interested. Among those who have been invited to such parleys are Adolph C. Miller, member of the federal reserve board; D. L. Wickens, farm mortgage expert of the department of agriculture, and Mordecai Ezekial, statistician of the farm board. Much other information has been obtained by Mr. Roosevelt through contact men whom he has sent to Washington.

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 88; recovered, 65; stripped, 11 [from Chicago police records for 24 hours ending at midnight Wednesday].

Court action against auto thieves yesterday: Robert Anderson, 4 charges of larceny; Floyd Schmidt, 4 charges of larceny; Anthony Fabiana, 4 charges of larceny, and Michael Laritano, 1 charge of larceny, all held to the grand jury by Judge John Gutknecht.

U.S. JUDGE ENTERS DECREE OF SALE FOR BLACKSTONE

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday entered a decree of sale for the Blackstone hotel and instructed Paul G. Evans, receiver, to socilit bids for the property and good will until Jan. 12. The hotel will be closed tomorrow at midnight for renovation. Plans are under way to reopen it in the spring.

Indications are that the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, holder of the first mortgage of $1,616,000 on the hotel, will bid in the property, but it is understood that the new management will be a separate organization. Negotiations are being made with a Chicago and a New York group, it was reported. Edwin L. Brashears, foreclosure receiver, said the renovation would cost about $300,000.

The financial troubles of the famous hotel, as well as those of most other hotels, yesterday were blamed on prohibition by F. H. Muller, steward at the Blackstone since it opened in 1910.

DE VALERA CRIES BRITAIN IS AIDING FOES' CAMPAIGN

Irish President Opens Drive for Votes.

BY HUGH CURRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Jan. 5.—President Eamon de Valera opened the campaign for the general election on Jan. 24 by addressing a crowd of 20,000 in Dublin tonight in behalf of Fianna Fail, the government party. Former President William T. Cosgrave, leader of the Cumann na nGaedheal, starts his campaign tomorrow.

De Valera in his address said that a vote for the Cosgrave party would be a vote for England against Ireland.

"British Want Cosgrave."

"The British want Cosgrave and the Cumann na nGaedheal back for one reason only—that they might hold them in the hollow of their hands and squeeze them as they want," the Free State president said.

He made no reference to separating from the British commonwealth to become a republic. He insisted that foreign press agencies, inspired by London, have maligned the Irish government all over the world. The president declared a victory for Fianna Fail will mean that the removal of the oath of allegiance to the British crown will become a law in spite of the senate. He characterized the office of governor general "just a mere rubber stamp" and concluded by appealing for order during the campaign.

Cosgrave today issued a denial of statements published in a De Valera newspaper that he was receiving help from the British government in the campaign. His party has announced that if it is returned to power it would make peace with England in the tariff war.

Farmers' League Enters Race.

The Farmers' league, headed by Deputy Frank MacDermott, today decided to enter the election as a separate party and contest the seats in 22 of the 26 election districts. Cosgrave has been dickering with MacDermott for support, but the latter announced that owing to the suddenness of the election, that there was no time to organize alliances. James Dillon, son of the famous Irish party leader and a deputy for Donegal, has signified he will support the Farmers' league.

The Labor party is a fourth bidder for votes. Labor deputies originally sided with the Fianna Fail to give the De Valera government a majority, but recently broke away over matters of policy. The elections will determine the composition of the new dail and will, therefore, decide whether De Valera is to remain at the head of the state.

ORDERS VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY IN $50,000 SUIT

Superior Judge Charles A. Williams entered a directed verdict of not guilty yesterday in the $50,000 suit brought by W. Rufus Edwards of Miami Beach, Fla., against three officials of the now defunct Hutchinson Film company. He denied a motion for a new trial and Edwards gave notice of appeal.

Defendants in the suit were Edward C. Carrington, 3020 Sheridan road, who denied any part in the sale of stock to Edwards; Horace L. Hayward of Punta Gorda, Fla., and Samuel S. Hutchinson, who is now in California. Edwards charged that by misrepresentation they induced him to buy $27,000 worth of stock in the film company at a time when it was about to go into receivership.

CUBAN OFFICER GETS TONGUE, EAR WITH DEATH NOTE

Police Lay Threat to Students.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 5.—A box containing a tongue and an ear neatly wrapped in tissue paper and enclosing a note threatening death was delivered today to Maj. Arsenio Ortiz, former military governor of Oriente province and most hated enemy of student oppositionists to the government.

Tonight a strong cordon of detectives guarded the major's home, with orders to shoot any trespassers on sight. An armored car and a police escort have also been placed at the disposal of the major.

The ear and tongue were believed to be those of Francisco Cepero, a policeman whose body was found near Miramar boulevard in the outskirts of Havana Tuesday night.

"You Are Next."

The note to Maj. Ortiz read:

"Keep this as a souvenir of your gang of government slayers. You are next in line, no matter how protected you are. We will get you next and quick."

Maj. Ortiz was indicted last February for being responsible for a terrorist régime in Oriente province. He was convicted but was later freed by President Machado. One attempt was made on his life early in December.

Today's action is laid to members of the national university student council which the police claim is behind recent terroristic outbreaks against authorities. The uprisings have proved a boomerang, however, since they have resulted in the death of five students in the last month. The fifth casualty occurred last night when Angel Alvarez, 23, was shot dead in an effort, according to police, to escape from custody.

Brig. Gen. Anciart, Havana's police chief, asserted tonight that he had obtained information from Alvarez that the murders of Capt. Miguel Angel Calvo, chief of the secret service, last July, and the senate president, Clemente Vazquez Bello, last September, were done by students.

Ear and Tongue Missing.

Chief Anciart declared that before Alvarez' death he was positively identified as one of the eight who slew Vazquez Bello, and that he implicated six other students.

Three of those implicated were arrested in connection with the killing of Policeman Cepero Tuesday night. Cepero's right ear and his tongue were missing when his body was found. Three bullets had been fired through his head. To his arm was attached a blue tag on which appeared the symbol of the Cuban A. B. C. society and warning "those with long tongues" to beware.

The trio held for the murder admitted that members of their group had taken a vow that for each "government assassination" they would kill three policemen and cut off their right ears.

COUNCIL EXTENDS TRANSIT MERGER TIME LIMIT YEAR

"L" Foreclosure Suits to Cause Delays.

The city council yesterday granted the Chicago Local Transportation company a twelve months' extension of time in which to accept the comprehensive transit ordinance, the terms of which call for a unified operation by this company of the surface and elevated lines. The council also extended for a year the day by day operation of the surface lines under the 1907 ordinance.

The extension gives the local transportation company until Jan. 31, 1934, to acquire the properties of the surface and elevated lines and begin the consolidated operation. The extension was opposed by seven aldermen who argued that a further delay in acceptance of the ordinance would stand in the way of efforts to get better transportation facilities. They recalled that the ordinance had been approved by a referendum vote of the people on July 1, 1930.

Year's Delay Is Compromise.

The council had been asked, in a letter submitted by C. F. Clark, president of the Chicago Local Transportation company, to approve an eighteen months' extension. However, after having Walter L. Fisher, attorney for the council local transportation company, recite the proceedings that are incident to the acquisition of the properties, the council adopted the twelve months' compromise suggested by Ald. John S. Clark [30th].

Mr. Clark pointed out that since the ordinance was adopted by the city council the Rapid Transit lines have gone into receivership, making it necessary to acquire that property through foreclosure. He said that some of the mortgages of the Rapid Transit company that must be foreclosed have antiquated provisions in them relating to the time that must elapse after default before foreclosure proceedings can be instituted, thereby prohibiting an early settlement.

"The new company cannot accept the ordinance until it has titles to the properties of the old companies," said Attorney Fisher, "and this can be done only by foreclosure."

Ask U. S. to Stop Pollution.

A protest to the federal government against the use of Lake Michigan as a dumping ground for sewage and refuse by private enterprises and individuals was approved by the council with the adoption of a resolution offered by Ald. Frank J. Corr [17th], which seeks to end the contamination of south side drinking water by phenol waste from plants in the industrial regions of Lake county, Indiana.

Ald. O. E. Northrup [19th] submitted a resolution on the same subject calling upon Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, to prepare financial plans and estimates on construction of filtration plants necessary to filter the city's water supply and to take action to obtain funds from the Reconstruction Finance corporation for the work.

The cost of filtration has been estimated roughly at $60,000,000.

An ordinance authorizing city department heads to operate their departments on the same basis as of Dec. 31, 1932, was adopted by the council. This ordinance gives the department heads authority to expend money pending the passage of the 1933 budget.

PURE MILK ASS'N ELECTION BATTLE BRINGS DEADLOCK

Insurgents Seek to Oust President.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Efforts by an insurgent faction within the Pure Milk association to displace Will C. McQueen, veteran dairyman, as president of the association caused a deadlock yesterday in the annual meeting for the election of a director from Kane county. The balloting was held at St. Charles.

McQueen was a candidate for director and cannot serve as president unless he gains this post. He was opposed by Arthur Hartman, a cattle dealer, and Joseph Leis, a dairy farmer living near Aurora. Two ballots were taken and the tally after each showed that none of the three had a majority. The meeting was then adjourned until Jan. 12.

Campaign to Oust McQueen.

For the last ten days there has been an intensive drive against the McQueen administration. His opponents, including Hartman, are said to favor a milk strike against Chicago consumers to compel the payment of a higher price for milk. Many of the anti-McQueen faction are dairymen who oppose the tuberculin test for cows.

The Pure Milk association, with a membership of 16,578 farmers in thirty counties supplying Chicago with milk, has in the past followed the policy of approving tuberculin tests.

At the St. Charles meeting Thomas Courtney of De Kalb county announced that northern Illinois farmers would work to have the general assembly adopt a law requiring all agencies transporting dairy products into the state to be licensed.

"Wisconsin has such a law," he said, "and no one can take dairy stock into that state from Illinois without a license. But Wisconsin trucks can carry dairy products and stock into Illinois without hindrance."

Will Discuss Dairy Policies.

National dairy policies are to be discussed today in the Hotel Sherman by farmers. Farmers' representatives from all parts of the country gathered yesterday for preliminary discussion at a meeting presided over by Charles W. Holman of Washington, D. C., secretary of the National Coöperative Milk Producers' federation.

One of the principal subjects to be discussed, it was said last night, will be the possibility of having dairy products included in the domestic allotment plans of congress for the relief of agriculture. Some of the coöperatives represented favor the inclusion of dairy products, but many others, notably the large ones in the middle west, have announced a belief the scheme would lower rather than increase the income of dairymen.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 5.—The prospect of legal 3.2 per cent beer in the United States is causing considerable amusement among Canadians, who have always had plenty of 6 per cent beer.

Asked today whether local firms would produce the weaker beer for export to the United States, Norman J. Dawes, president of National Breweries, a leading beer firm here, said:

"We would not even consider producing 3 per cent beer, which is inferior beer, under our own brands for sale in the United States.

"God has been good to us, for we still have plenty to eat and are warm and comfortable. I am sending this as a little thanksgiving for all the good He, in His goodness, has bestowed upon us."

NATIONAL AUTO DEATH RATE IS CUT 13% IN 1932

Records made public by the National Safety council yesterday disclosed that the national automobile death toll for 1932 was approximately 29,000. This is a decrease of 4,000 deaths or 13 per cent over the total of 33,000 persons who met death in motor vehicle accidents during 1931. The fatalities during 1932 were the lowest since 1928.

Five persons were injured, two of them probably fatally, yesterday afternoon when an automobile driven by Matthew Mulvihill, 59 years old, 6716 South Bishop street, crashed into a Waukegan fire truck at Genesee street and South avenue, Waukegan.

Mulvihill, the driver of the automobile, and Mrs. Catherine Kelly, 60 years old, 1312 West 64th street, were taken to the Victory Memorial hospital, Waukegan, where their condition was said to be critical. Mrs. Kelly's daughter, Mrs. Helen Joyce, 24 years old; her son, Clement Joyce, 4 years old, and Fireman Julius V. Bals were less seriously injured.

There was one automobile death in Cook county yesterday, raising the 1933 toll to 13. The victim was John Alelunas, 50 years old, of 3491 Flournoy street, a janitor, who died in the county hospital from injuries received Jan. 1 when he was struck by an automobile at South Keeler avenue and Arthington street. Charles Goles, 21 years old, 1953 South Trumbull avenue, the driver, was notified to appear at the inquest.

Andrew Johnson, 23 years old, was fatally hurt last night when he was struck by an auto driven by J. F. McElroy on the Dunes highway near Gary. He died in a Gary hospital and police held McElroy.

REDS REPORTED ON WAY TO COAL MINE WAR ZONE

Agitators Leave Chicago with "Relief" Trucks.

BY WALTER FITZMAURICE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Taylorville, Ill., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Communist agitators from Chicago are reported planning a march on Taylorville to stir up strife in the Christian county mine war.

A private dispatch from Chicago offices of the Peabody Coal company this afternoon stated that the communists had collected seventeen truckloads of supplies for "relief" of striking members of the Progressive Miners' union and had left their quarters at State and Van Buren streets about 10 a. m. for Taylorville.

State militia men who have occupied Christian county since the killing of two persons and the wounding of fourteen others in a pitched battle between striking Progressives and working United Mine Workers at Kincaid Tuesday night watched all roads into the county tonight but encountered no communists.

Advance Is Delayed.

Latest information from local offices of the Peabody company was that the Reds had collected and loaded the supplies but were deferring their advance until tomorrow.

At a conference with Sheriff Charles Weineke tonight Col. R. W. Davis, commanding the five companies of troops in the county, declared the communists would be barred from entry. Unless the truck drivers can produce invoices and consignment sheets, he said, their cargoes would be seized and held for twenty-four hours, subsequently to be distributed to the poor by the troops.

"We're not going to tolerate any red soap boxers here at this time," said Col. Davis. "The situation is bad enough now."

The Chicago dispatch, which was turned over to Sheriff Charles Weineke here, said communist solicitors had collected the "relief" supplies on the south and west sides of the city Wednesday.

Sheriff Seeks Bombers.

At the time of receiving the report about 4 p. m. the sheriff said he was too busy hunting the reported headquarters of a local bombing ring to give it immediate attention. Col. Davis was awaiting instructions from the sheriff before taking action.

The death toll of this week's strife was increased to three at noon today when Thomas Hickman, 41, deputized dock boss at the Kincaid mine, died of a bullet wound in St. Vincent's hospital here.

A Kincaid sniper shot Hickman in the eye yesterday morning as he and Fulton Smith, another deputy, were patroling the village just before the morning whistle blew. Fulton was wounded in the shoulder.

The cells in the county courthouse here were jammed tonight as Sheriff Weineke continued serving the forty-one John Doe murder warrants issued yesterday by State's Attorney John W. Coale following Monday night's clash at the Kincaid mine in which Vincent Rodems, 29, Springfield special deputy and Mrs. Emma Cumeriatto, 49, wife of a Kincaid striker, were shot to death.

24 Face Murder Charges.

Twenty-four prisoners were in jail tonight, including Police Chief Albert Mattozzo of Kincaid, and four wives of strikers. All are to be arraigned on charges of murder next week.

It is State's Attorney Coale's theory that the progressives opened the shooting at Kincaid Monday night and those seen with firearms or ammunition in their camp are therefore guilty of the deaths of Rodems and Mrs. Cumeriatto regardless of the source of the shots that killed them.

Robbers Hold Up Magazine Distributors; Loot Is $400

A watchman, two truck drivers, and half a dozen helpers of the J. O. Stoll company, wholesale magazine distributors, 245 East Grand avenue, were held up by three armed men last night and the robbers got $400. They lined up the watchman, William Newman, 502 South Oakley boulevard, and the helpers, all boys. A truck driver, Thomas Conroy, 1347 Sedgwick street, came in from a delivery and he was robbed of $130. From Howard Weaver, 907 Fletcher street, another driver, they obtained $120. A small safe yielded $150. The bandits were unable to open a large Brink's Express safe which contained several thousand dollars.

Two Negroes Perish When Trapped by Fire in Flat

Edward Jackson, 35 years old, and Reed Hill, 33, both colored, were burned to death in a fire that trapped them in the second floor rear flat at 3122 South Wabash avenue last night. The fire started on the first floor, used as a storeroom, supposedly of spontaneous combustion. Jackson and Hill were sleeping upstairs.

LABOR IN FAVOR OF STRIKE FOR SHORTER HOURS

That or Dole, Green Tells Congress.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Organized labor will favor a general strike, if necessary, said William Green, president of the Federation of Labor, today, to bring about universal adoption of the shorter work week.

Advocating the bill by Senator Black [Dem., Ala.] to establish a five day week and six hour day in all manufacturing industries, the federation head created considerable surprise among members of a senate judiciary subcommittee when he said it was a question either of a dole, a universal strike, or legislative action.

He called the the strike "economic force," as compared with the third alternative of "legislative force."

Asks Government Example.

When Senator Norris [Rep., Neb.], subcommittee chairman, said a general strike would be "terrible," and that it should be avoided at all costs, Green said it was "through the exercise of economic force that we get relief."

"I shrink to think it necessary to take such steps, but industrial leaders refuse to take action," he added. "Some have voluntarily established the five day week, but they are so isolated that application of the shorter work week in a few industries has no effect on the general situation."

He said organized labor did not want the dole and that as a first step in its program it would ask the new congress to apply the thirty hour week in government.

Sees Millions Affected.

General establishment in industry of the shorter working time, he said would create jobs for 6,500,000 men out of the 11,590,000 he estimated to have been not working last November.

He said from 22,000,000 to 23,000,000 persons were directly affected. Twenty-two per cent of the workers were on part time last month, he said.

Married in Poland

Hyman Fuhrman, 87 years old, and his wife, Pearl Fuhrman, 75 years old, 3523 Ogden avenue, got a license to remarry yesterday in the county building. They were married in Poland 60 years ago and came to the United States 22 years ago. Deputy Clerk Peter Dalton of the marriage license bureau explained that many persons who marry in foreign countries remarry here to obtain passports more easily. The Fuhrmans were accompanied by their grandson, Dave, who acted as interpreter.

CAPONE COUSIN IS FOUND GUILTY OF GUN TOTING

Charles Fischetti, 31 years old, cousin and former bodyguard of Al Capone, was found guilty last night of carrying a concealed weapon by a jury in the court of Municipal Judge Harold P. O'Connell. He faces a maximum sentence of 1 year in jail and a fine of $300.

CHARLES FISCHETTI.

Fischetti was arrested on Nov. 6 in a raid on an office in the 1 North La Salle Street building by Policemen John Howe and William Drury. Arrested with him were William (Three Fingered Jack) White, racketeer; Murray Humphries, a leader in the Capone syndicate, and William (Klondike) O'Donnell, gang leader.

All four were charged with trying to interfere with the election of Nov. 8, but the cases were nol prossed in the Felony court. Fischetti, White, and Humphries also were charged with carrying concealed weapons. White and Humphries were granted separate trials yesterday.

GETS PROPERTY BACK CHEAP; IS ONLY ONE TO BID

Farmer Buys Live Stock for 50 Cents a Head.

Livestock and implements owned by Fred Klein were ordered sold to satisfy indebtedness. They were offered at public auction yesterday.

A threshing outfit was sold to an outside bidder, but all the livestock and other equipment went to Mr. Klein who was the sole bidder for them.

For some of his livestock Mr. Klein paid as much as 50 cents a head. It cost him only $109.50 to bid in all the equipment and stock.

As the sale began neighbors of Klein called potential buyers aside and as a result of their persuasion Klein had the field to himself.

Two Foreclosures Made.

Le Mars, Ia., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Two mortgage foreclosures were accomplished here today without interference of farmers who yesterday stopped the forced sale of the John A. Johnson farm.

The farms of John Amundsen and Willie E. Wilson were sold to mortgage holders for the full debt price. The Amundsen mortgage was held by the Prudential Life Insurance company and the mortgage against the Wilson land by John Hancock.

Yesterday 500 farmers gathered at the courthouse and dragged Herbert S. Martin, attorney representing the New York Life Insurance company, from the steps when he submitted his bid for the Johnson farm. Later the bid was raised to $33,000, covering the entire mortgage held by the insurance company, after the farmers had threatened Martin with lynching.

Two Set for Saturday.

Two more sales are scheduled for Saturday. There were reports that the farmers would gather again to stop these sales.

Sheriff R. E. Rippey, who also was manhandled by yesterday's crowd, said an attempt would be made to hold the sales.

The farmers quieted yesterday after Judge C. W. Pitts agreed to intercede in their behalf with Governor Elect Clyde Herring. They had asked Pitts to refuse to sign papers in mortgage foreclosures.

Judge Pitts wrote the governor elect suggesting that the legislature deprive judges of jurisdiction in all foreclosure cases where a money judgment is involved for a period of five to seven months. The plan would, in effect, be a moratorium on mortgages for that period.

Herring, in Des Moines, said he would have "something definite to offer" the general assembly in the way of farm relief next week. He did not comment on the feasibility of Judge Pitts' plan.

VOTE ARBITRARY PRICES FOR FARM CROPS LEFT OVER

Proposed Amendment Stirs Opposition.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—An amendment to the domestic allotment farm relief bill which would fix arbitrary prices on the farm carryover of the 1932-'33 crop year stock of wheat, cotton and hogs was adopted today by the house agriculture committee shortly before the measure came up for general debate on the house floor.

The amendment is designed, according to committee members, to make the alleged "benefits" of the farm relief bill immediately available. It would stipulate "fair exchange values" of 75 cents a bushel on wheat, 9 cents a pound on cotton and 5 cents a pound on hogs during the period from enactment of the relief bill to the beginning of the crop year 1933-1934, at which time the "fair exchange values" for these commodities would be fixed by the secretary of agriculture in accordance with the terms of the domestic allotment measure.

No Price Curtailment Imposed.

In other words, a processing tax would be applied thirty days after enactment of the bill, and farmers without any requirement as to curtailing production would receive on the domestic consumption percentage of the stocks still in their hands an amount equivalent to the tax. The tax and farmers' allowance would be figured as the difference between the current farm prices for the three commodities and the "fair exchange values" fixed by the amendment. This would make the tax and allowance on wheat something over 40 cents, on cotton about 4 cents, and on hogs about 2 cents.

The Democratic farm bill began its legislative journey today with every indication that it will be bitterly opposed and considerably longer in achieving passage than Democratic leaders had expected. Representative Henry T. Rainey [Dem., Ill.], minority leader, reconsidered his prediction of yesterday that the bill would meet house approval before the end of the week.

Called "Spurious" Plan.

Most of today's debate was in opposition to the plan. Representative George Huddleston [Dem., Ala.], a farmer himself, called it "a venture into communism, an unworkable and discriminatory measure of doubtful constitutionality," and a "false and spurious document."

Representative Carl Chindblom [Rep., Ill.] declared it was "a new panacea for the ills of the farmer," and that it "would put government into business with a vengeance."

I. C. C. Extends Time for Filing Briefs in Gas Case

Upon agreement between counsel for the city of Chicago and the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, the Illinois commerce commission at Springfield yesterday extended the time limit for filing briefs in the gas rate case until Jan. 19. The date for oral arguments was continued from Jan. 11 to Jan. 26.

SERVICE PLANES PROVIDE THRILL AT MIAMI RACES

Dixie Flyer Is Winner of Handicap Event.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Herman Crosman III., Wilmington, N. C., flying a Moth, won the 238 mile Henry L. Doherty handicap race from Daytona beach to Miami today in one of the opening features of the Miami air races. He was awarded the Doherty trophy and $1,000. The winner's elapsed time was 2 hours and 14 minutes.

Raoul Cote, Kankakee, Ill., in a Travelair, won second place and $500, and Edgar Woodhams, Manhasset, N. Y., flying a Waco, third place and $250.

The air races attracted the largest array of military planes ever concentrated at one point in the south. Thirty-six army fighting planes thrilled the crowd at the Municipal airport with maneuvers, flying Marines from Quantico did stunts, and army and navy bombers put on exhibitions.

Atlanta Flyer Winner.

Events and winners included:

Fog Forces 75 Down.

It was necessary to postpone several events until Friday when more than seventy-five flyers bound for the races were grounded by fog north of Jacksonville.

Another feature of the day was the christening of the new type army bomber, a slender graceful low winged monoplane from the second bombing squadron, Fort Crockett, Tex., which was named "The City of Miami" by Miss Ellen Knight, Miami society girl, who broke a bottle of Cuban champagne on the ship.

Among those who attended the races were Rear Admiral William Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, Washington, D. C.; Rear Admiral J. J. Raby, Charleston, S. C., and Paul W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear company.

"COUNT BUELOW" TO RETURN HERE FOR PLOT TRIAL

Henry Dechow, alias Count Enrique von Buelow, waived hearing yesterday in New York City on a charge of issuing $100,000 in counterfeit $100 bills in Chicago. He will be returned for immediate trial in the Chicago federal court. Dr. Valentine Gregory Burtan, 34 years old, a New York physician, who was arrested as an alleged member of the counterfeiting ring, took steps yesterday to fight removal. His bond was set $50,000 and the case was continued until Jan. 18.

Dr. Burtan protested that the charge was false and said that he was connected with the case through error based on the fact that he had treated Dechow for heart trouble.

Dr. Burtan and Dechow, who is the former husband of Mrs. Lottie Brenner, wealthy widow of Nathan Brenner, Chicago alderman, are said to have come to Chicago several days before Christmas. Dechow is said to have brought $97,000 in fraudulent $100 bills, giving $40,000 of them to Chicago hoodlums to circulate.

Kenneth Rouse Waives His Police Appointment

Kenneth Rouse, former University of Chicago football captain, who placed third in the recent civil service examinations for vacancies on the Chicago police force, said yesterday that he has waived his appointment to the force. He gave as his reasons the present uncertainty of all city employes' pay, and the fact that he cannot leave his duties as director of student promotions at the university on such short notice.

"MOIST THROAT" FOUND SECRET OF COUGH RELIEF

Your throat and bronchial tubes are lined with millions of pores like tiny bottles continually supplying moisture to the delicate tissues . . . until you "catch cold."

Then these "bottles" get plugged up, phlegm accumulates, affording dangerous germs a breeding place. Your throat feels hot and dry. Tickling, irritation and coughing set in.

Your cough will be cured only when the flow of the natural fluid is increased, loosening the phlegm so that it can be expelled. Many cough "remedies" contain numbing drugs which merely deaden the nerves . . . but don't get at the root of the trouble.

PERTUSSIN, a scientific remedy, which doctors have prescribed for many years, is the extract of a famous herb which opens the tiny glands, stimulates the flow of the throat's natural moisture and brings quick relief. It helps nature heal that cough from the inside out.

CHARGES TREATY PERILS ILLINOIS ROUTE TO GULF

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Adoption of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty in its pending form at Washington would wreck the Illinois waterway and the water route from the great lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, all for the benefit of Canadian power interests at Niagara. This was the warning sounded yesterday by Lachlan MacLeay, executive vice president of the Mississippi Valley association.

Article 8 of the treaty, which is based on a diversion of only 1,500 cubic second feet of water from Lake Michigan by Dec. 31, 1938, Mr. MacLeay set forth, would not only surrender control of Lake Michigan, which is not a boundary water, to Canada, but is contrary to the recommendations of eminent army engineers.

If the senate ratifies the treaty without modifying article 8, Mr. MacLeay declares, commercial navigation of the lakes to gulf water route will be blocked, the Illinois waterway, almost completed, will be transformed into a waterway without sufficient water for traffic, and the heart of the continent will still suffer from the economic squeeze caused by the Panama canal.

Need for Adequate Diversion.

"The importance of providing an adequate diversion for the lakes to the gulf waterway was recognized by congress in 1930 in incorporating in the act authorizing the completion of the Illinois waterway, a provision directing the secretary of war to make a study of the amount of water necessary for a commercially useful waterway," Mr. MacLeay's statement said. "Congress clearly intended that the necessary amount of diversion should be determined by actual operation, and ordered the secretary of war to report the result of the study on or before July 31, 1938.

"However, article 8 nullifies the intent of congress by transferring all control of diversion from the great lakes to an international commission, despite the fact that Lake Michigan is a wholly American body of water. Ratification of the treaty in its present form will forever preclude this country from increasing diversion for the waterway without the consent of Canada, whose interest is solely in the development of the St. Lawrence waterway.

The Engineers' Recommendations.

"The United States army engineers have consistently urged a minimum diversion of from 5,000 to 10,000 second feet for the lakes to the gulf waterway.

"In 1920 Col. J. G. Warren recommended 10,000 second feet of diversion for the lakes to the gulf waterway in a report to the chief of engineers. The following year Col. W. V. Judson urged a minimum diversion of 7,500 second feet.

"Gen. Edgar Jadwin, then chief of engineers, testified before congress in 1929 that an annual average diversion of 5,000 second feet would be necessary to maintain a commercially navigable waterway.

"His recommendation was also urged by Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, the present chief of engineers, in testifying before the commerce committee of the United States senate in May, 1930. At that time he told the committee that 'the indications are, with everything in view, that something like 5,000 feet per second should be held available for a commercially useful waterway.'

Want Treaty Modified.

"The Mississippi Valley association, which represents industrial, agricultural and shipping interests of 25 Mississippi valley states, does not oppose the St. Lawrence waterway. The association believes, however, that the treaty should be modified to provide for the continuation of a sufficient amount of the existing diversion to insure a commercially successful waterway. It is not to the best interests of the nation to forever barter away our right to make a navigable all American waterway from the lakes to the gulf until the question of diversion can be accurately determined.

"If the St. Lawrence waterway is to aid agriculture in the land-locked middle west, low cost transportation by water must be provided from the grain centers of these states to the great lakes. If America surrenders her right to provide an adequate waterway to move grain from St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Sioux City, and other grain centers, the penalty imposed on this interior region by the Panama canal will be more than doubled, and the farmers of these states will not be able to compete with Canadian grain in the world markets."

"Lame Duck" Amendment Ratified by Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Oklahoma's legislature today ratified the federal amendment to abolish the "lame duck" session of congress and provide that the President and congressmen take office in January instead of in March.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931, C. M. Co.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Few of our Presidents retired from their high office with so general an approval of their service and so general a liking and respect from their countrymen as Calvin Coolidge. The confidence he had earned, not only by his conduct of the nation's affairs but by the personal qualities he had revealed, was as substantial as any achieved by any public man in our history, and it followed him to the end. His popularity never attained the emotional heights of that of several of his great predecessors, but he represented to the American people, regardless of party, something sane and reliable in the national counsels which our people cherish and which in these troubled times has seemed of utmost worth. His loss as a counselor and as an exemplar of the undramatic virtues upon which the solid elements of our national prosperity and progress have been founded from the beginning will be felt throughout the nation.

Calvin Coolidge expressed in his life and his personality the character and the tradition which have been the mainstay of the republic, and he endeared himself to his people in spite of reserve of manner and his lack of those flights of imagination which arouse the passing enthusiasm of the hour. He won respect and confidence because he was at all times true to himself in a field where pretense is the rule.

In his character as chief magistrate, although in personality the essence of New England, Calvin Coolidge tried loyally to protect and advance the interests of the whole nation, its fundamental and general welfare, against all the scramblers after special privileges and benefits. History will mark him likewise and especially as the almost solitary advocate of economy and self-restraint in a period of heedless spending and unbridled adventure. If a maxim were to be chosen for him as a statesman it would be that of the Greek sage, "Moderation in all things," and certainly in this hour the American people are not likely to underrate the significance of that neglected counsel or to fail to cherish the memory of the counselor.

Calvin Coolidge, the man, has passed from the human scene, but not, we trust, the influence of his public character and philosophy. They, always, were a reminder of the qualities and principles upon which the solidity and continuity of the American nation have rested and must continue to rest. When we wander away from them we meet affliction and defeat. This path out of our present tribulation we must follow. Justice to all, moderation in the exercise of our powers and the exploitation of our great resources, loyalty to our traditions of industry, thrift, and intelligent confidence in the national destiny were deep in the heart and mind of Calvin Coolidge, and they speak to his countrymen in his memory.

OUR WONDERLAND OF BUREAUCRACY.

James M. Beck's illuminating study of the rise of federal bureaucracy in the United States has been so well received that a revised and enlarged edition now appears and we hope will have the widest reading. "Our Wonderland of Bureaucracy" is one of the most challenging books in recent years. It especially deserves the study of editors. A "study of the growth of bureaucracy in the federal government and its destructive effect upon the constitution," it exposes the growth and extent of an evil which threatens American institutions and principles with complete subversion, and which has been going forward with accelerating speed without adequate public attention and therefore without restraint. Mr. Beck is one of our leading constitutional lawyers and one of the outstanding representatives in congress. His book is a brilliant exposition as well as a mine of information which will astonish most readers.

To the latest edition Representative Beck has added an epilogue in which he discusses the gross disparity between the burden and benefits of the different states and the injustices of federal income taxation, recalling Washington's warning that the perpetuity of the Union would depend upon a vital sentiment of union, and that in turn would depend upon economic solidarity, or, as Washington put it, "an indissoluble community of interests as one nation." That indissoluble community cannot be preserved if a sectional minority can exact disproportionate sacrifices from a majority or if nontaxpayers can impose irresponsible and crushing burdens upon taxpayers. Washington, says Mr. Beck, "would wonder whether that spirit of union, without which, as he said, the United States could not endure, would not be slowly impaired by an unjust system, which provokes the wildest extravagance in congress, due to the consciousness of many states that their representatives can appropriate the public revenues with unbridled prodigality—often for purely local benefits—because their constituencies will not be called upon to pay more than an infinitesimal part of the cost. The present saturnalia of extravagance in congress will not end, although it may be temporarily lessened under the stress of critical times, while inequality in contribution and power to appropriate remain."

The spirit of justice and equality of rights, upon which our unity and progress as a free people depend, unquestionably has been weakened in recent years, and we do not think Mr. Beck exaggerates when, comparing our tendencies with those described by Gibbon in the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," he inquires "whether we may not now have reached the final stage when the people, instead of relying upon themselves, are beginning to look to the central government to be fed and amused?" If Mr. Beck regarded simply the phenomena of the depression period, we might accuse him of undue pessimism, but, as his study strikingly illustrates, the tendencies and fallacies he and many thinking Americans deplore manifested themselves long before the collapse of the boom period, and the issue is one which will remain after this depression is conquered. No issue in our history was of greater moment than this. Probably indeed none was so momentous as this. Our unity, our peace and our progress are at stake.

RUINOUS RELIEF.

Mr. Wilfred S. Reynolds on behalf of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission estimates that doles to the idle in Illinois this year will cost 92 million dollars at the present rate of outlay. All but 12 million will be spent in Cook county. The 92 million dollars does not include the ordinary sums spent in normal times for various forms of charity in the community. It is an additional sum which presumably must be borrowed from the federal treasury or on the credit of the state or its subdivisions.

Merely to state the facts is to expose the absurdity of the program. That much money would not be lent to Chicago for unproductive purposes by any responsible lending agency; and if the money is advanced by an irresponsible government agency it will bankrupt the federal treasury within a few years. The United States treasury might have the resources to finance the idle in Chicago alone, but it cannot finance depression relief in New York, Boston, Detroit, Philadelphia and a score of other cities.

Welfare work on that scale can lead only to the bankruptcy of the governments which attempt to finance it and thus to universal insolvency. In the vain attempt to support the idle in idleness those who are supporting themselves and the state will be ruined and, in turn, forced to seek charity. The scheme is self-destructive, suicidal and none the less cruel because it is put forward in the name of relief. What happens when such schemes are attempted is revealed by the experience in New Zealand. Those with jobs and those without them join in a common ruin.

Professional welfare workers may be expected to protest that anything less than the program they envisage will entail human suffering. Possibly so; but the penalties of acceptance of their budget are far graver in terms of human suffering. The repeated warnings which were given in THE TRIBUNE of the consequences which must flow from the extravagance of our local governments went unheeded by many public officials. The results are now all too apparent. The payment of teachers' salaries, for example, is half a year in arrears. The board of education, despite its taxing power, cannot borrow to meet its deficit because bankers and every one else with money to lend know that the incomes from which all taxes must be paid are so depleted that the risk is too great. The same incomes which cannot support the schools at the 1932 level cannot support an added bill of 80 million dollars for relief; and no amount of emotional oratory can alter that bitter fact. Possibly Chicago could find 80 million for relief if it were not for federal taxation which takes more than that amount yearly from this community; but we cannot support our idle and the federal bureaucracy as well.

The relief budget will have to be reduced and greatly reduced. In this connection there is much to be said for the plan of "earned relief" put forward by Mr. Martin Bickham. Instead of supporting the idle in idleness he has sought to provide them with useful work. The administrative costs have not proved to be excessive, as many had feared. The relief fund which he has administered has been used to clean and repair public buildings and other public property in Chicago, including streets and alleys. His plan has tended to maintain the morale of the unfortunate instead of destroying initiative and moral fiber. His plan exposes the loafers and condemns them. It discourages professional pauperism and tends to restore personal pride and ambition. To that extent it reduces the demand for the dole and offers some hope that the relief budget can be held within reasonable limits.

MR. INSULL'S FATE.

[New York Evening Post.]

Five judges of the Court of Appeals have declared that the crimes charged against Samuel Insull have not been proved and that Mr. Insull, therefore, is not subject to extradition to the United States. We should think that such a decision would pretty much nullify any extradition treaty. Most fugitives are sought for extradition under charges and not under conviction. But in its larger aspects the decision is not so great a victory for Mr. Insull as it seems. Whether or not he be criminally liable, he owes it to his thousands of distressed stockholders to come home and try to disentangle the mess that he left. When he does not do that he forfeits the respect of decent men. Of course, he is old and he does face the danger of persecution by the corrupt political authorities in Chicago whom he himself created and supported. Nevertheless, it is the part of courage and fair play for him to come home and face these difficulties. It is the least that he can do to help repair the damage that he has done. If he doesn't, his punishment is yet severe, even though he can sit in a luxurious hotel and view daily the lovely ruins of the Acropolis. His real sentence was pronounced when his own Greek lawyer opened thus his defense: "We must think of Mr. Insull as a Greek and judge him as a Greek." Mr. Insull is no longer the Englishman that he was born or the American that he was bred. He is, to the end of his life, the pitiful thing, an exile in disgrace.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

A CONVICT who had disappeared from the Illinois penitentiary came back the other night and knocked persistently at the great iron gates until they opened and let him back to his nice warm cell. He said he had been kidnaped and carried away while he was outside the prison walls serving as a trusty. The newspapers said the prison authorities expressed a little doubt about this, but it may be true. Say what you will about jails, they give three meals a day, clothing, a bed, a roof, baths, laundry, and a doctor's care all free. And radio concerts and football games optional. Oh, there's worse places; there's worse places!

THE ANTI-SUPERSTITION SOCIETY (which is the most superstitious society we know of, because they pay dues and spend a lot of time proving that the hind leg of a graveyard rabbit won't keep away the jinks) is now out to demonstrate that 13 is not unlucky. Certainly not. Didn't Solomon take just thirteen years to build his temple and wasn't Solomon the wisest man in the world? If there had been anything to the thirteen myth old Solomon would have hurried up the job and finished the temple in twelve years. And the United States began with the thirteen original colonies. Which proves there is no bad luck in 13. Or does it?

MAGI.

Three who were wise
And bent with age
Came from the East.
The eldest sage

Was ninety and nine,
And the three were kings:
Their mels were loaded
With costly things

Like silver and gold
And frankincense.
(And on the way
A faint incense

From the mummies' tombs
Caught in their hair,
Which was silvered sable,
And lingered there.)

The lapis of Egypt
The rubies of Ind,
Bore the three kings.
(And the desert wind

Of the pagan gods
Sang in the sands
In an ancient tongue.)
Through night-clad lands

Rode the three kings.
Their lives were old,
Their camels were tired
And laden with gold.

They knew not the end,—
But the end was far,
And all their guide
Was a low-hung star.

They sought a King
And a God for men.
They were very wise,
And time and again

They stopped to add
To the wealth they bore
One pearl, one opal,
One emerald more.

Oh, the gifts they brought Him
Were rich indeed.
But they brought Him nothing
That He would need.

WISH THE SECRET SIX wouldn't lay their traps to snare villains away out in a lonely spot in the forest preserve. They're such showy, spectacular things, full of flashlights and explosions and sleuths running around waving pistols, that it's a shame to have it all wasted. Set your bandit traps down at the corner of State and Madison, please, Secret Six, or at Soldiers' field on the lake front at, say, half past two in the afternoon, so that we can all attend. You won't have to tell us the time, though. Everybody knows that, anyhow.

AND AGAIN we rise up with a protest to the technocrats. We cannot admit that modern machinery is the all conquering power they claim it is until somebody invents a fountain pen that won't leak all over your vest and your best shirt when you forget to put the cap back on said fountain pen and shove it into your vest pocket pen down.

. . . . . .

There's an evening star at evening,
See how bright it seems to gleam:
Does it mark a new beginning
Or the ending of a dream?
Down the drowsy road to somewhere
One may hear the silver chime,
Guiding one who journeys bravely
In an early harvest time.

SECONDARY ANEMIAS.

PERNICIOUS anemia was given the headlines of public attention when preparations of liver were found to be an effective remedy and, within limitations, a cure for it. Since the term pernicious was a harsh one, many persons preferred to call this disorder primary anemia. It was the general opinion that pernicious anemia did not grow out of any other disease and, therefore, the term primary seemed to fit it reasonably well.

The theory originally was that in pernicious anemia the blood making apparatus worked well enough, but that for some reason or other the blood was destroyed rapidly, at times more rapidly than the blood factory could turn out a finished product. In consequence there was a deficiency in red blood cells and many of those found present and at work were raw recruits, untrained soldiers, imperfect and juvenile corpuscles, scarcely able to do to the full the work they were called on to perform. Later it was found that the cause of pernicious anemia lies either in the liver, the stomach, or in some defect in the liver-stomach combination.

All forms of anemia not included in the group of pernicious anemias are grouped together under the name secondary anemias, meaning the anemias that are secondary to other well known diseases and disorders. If a person has a severe illness of any character and becomes pale and anemic in consequence thereof the anemia shown by a blood test is classed as a secondary anemia. On the basis of this line of division between the primary and secondary anemias some of the latter, for instance chlorosis, appear to belong in the primary anemias. Physicians have a better line of division. If blood examination shows the deficiency in coloring matter greater than that of the red cells the anemia is of the secondary type. If the deficiency of red cells is the greater in a given case the diagnosis is primary anemia.

The secondary anemias are much less serious. However, if the cause of the secondary anemia is very serious as, for instance, cancer or consumption, the outlook is bad, but that is not because of the anemia.

Even more important is the difference in treatment. The secondary anemias are treated by some form of iron tonic. Iron tonics are useless in the primary anemias. The trend of opinion now is that the old fashioned forms of iron are the best. But to be of much service they must be given in full dosage and kept up a long time. Most of the iron swallowed is passed unabsorbed, but the plan is that followed in fattening hogs—the trough is kept full and somehow enough will reach the spot where it is needed. It is generally agreed now that the addition of a trace of copper to the iron in the tonic in some way helps to get it into action.

The most recent suggestion is that the iron be combined with what may be called a secondary liver extract. The extract so serviceable in the treatment of pernicious anemia is not helpful in treating secondary anemias. But an extract is now being made in a different way and it is being used, apparently with benefit, in treating secondary anemias.

Finally the successful treatment of secondary anemia is largely dependent on the original disorder. If a woman is chlorotic she will not improve much, regardless of tonics, unless she loosens the pressure on her liver of tight clothing. If the anemia results from living indoors that bad habit must be rectified. In many cases overcoming the constipation habit is more important than taking iron tonics. If malaria is the cause quinine is a necessary part of the cure. And so on for a large number of diseases from which secondary anemias may result.

MAY BE DIRTY AIR.

W. B. writes: Is spitting of black or dark phlegm and frequent coughing a sign of tubercular trouble? I am the average weight and height for a young man, but eat very little and am a light sleeper.

REPLY.

HEALTHY PEOPLE.

G. L. writes: I have a daughter who is 5 years and 4 months old. She is taking dancing lessons—acrobatic and tap. I have been told that acrobatic dancing will injure the child—on the inside.

REPLY.

No. Circus performers are healthy people. So are those who do acrobatic stunts on the vaudeville stage.

MORTGAGE REDEMPTION.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—[Legal Friend of The People.]—1. An unmarried man owning improved real estate, mortgaged, dies leaving no will. Heirs are unable to take up mortgage when due. If party holding mortgage considers renewal, would signatures of all heirs be necessary? 2. In the same case, heirs fail to meet mortgage, property being sold at foreclosure and the fifteen months for redemption is running—if some of the heirs buy property back, have the remaining heirs any right in the property?

L. M. G.

1. The limitation period on the mortgage notes is ten years. In this sense it would be safe for the mortgage holder to wait any time short of ten years without an extension agreement. In other words, he would continue in a position to enforce the original instrument.

2. No. We advise that the redemption be handled through an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

STUDENT ALIEN.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—[Friend of The People.]—A young man entered this country as a student, having studied here for the last five years. He is about to marry a girl who is an American citizen. Can he remain in this country and become a citizen also? Or must he return to the place he originally came from and then reenter? Should he leave the country, will he be able to come back without any difficulty? R. J.

You are advised that an alien who was admitted to the United States subsequent to June 30, 1924, as a student under Section 4 (e) of the Act of May 26, 1924, may remain in this country only so long as he maintains the exempt status of a student and refrains from engaging in remunerative employment of any kind.

His marriage to a citizen of the United States will not serve to waive the requirement that he leave the United States when he relinquishes his student status. His marriage to a citizen of this country will give him a nonquota status provided the marriage took place prior to July 1, 1932, and his citizen wife may petition for the issuance of a nonquota immigration visa in his behalf, if the marriage occurred on or after that date he will be entitled only to preference within the quota for the country of which he is a citizen.

In any event, the immigration visa which he will require, whether quota or nonquota as a condition precedent to lawful admission for permanent residence, can only be obtained from an American consul abroad.

K. I. ZIMMERMAN,
Assistant District Director of Immigration.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JANUARY 6, 1917.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The senate today vouchsafed President Wilson a qualified indorsement of his peace appeal to the European belligerents. Facing the defeat of Senator Hitchcock's laudatory resolution—which result would have been tantamount to repudiation of the President's attitude—the administration leaders sought safety in compromise and accepted a substitute offered by Senator Jones, Republican, expressing approval of only that part of the peace note requesting the belligerents to state their terms. Having obtained this modified indorsement of his action in proposing a peace discussion, the President will initiate secret negotiations with the belligerents to ascertain if there is a feasible basis for bringing the warring powers together in a conference.

LONDON.—The Danube port of Braila, Rumania, one of the most important commercial centers in the country, has been captured by the Germanic allies. Troops of the Danube army advancing from the south and west united with the Bulgarian forces on the Dobrudjan side of the city to effect its capture. The reduction of the last defenses of the great Rumanian granary was rapid. German and Austrian battalions broke through the Braila bridgehead position and in a house to house struggle captured Gurgeurti and Romanul, two towns within the city's defenses. Today the Germans and Bulgars coöperated in the final stroke, the former sweeping into the city from the southwest, the latter advancing across the bridge from Macin, on the right bank of the Danube.

OTHER WAR NEWS.—German troops have captured an island in the Dvina river to the north of Dvinsk from the Russians and have also made gains south of Brody in Galicia. Fighting on the west front is confined mostly to artillery actions with minor infantry fighting and trench raids at various points. Spain is aroused by the sinking of the steamer San Leandro by a submarine yesterday. One Greek and one Norwegian are reported lost.

CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mexico.—Villa was defeated at Jiminez by Gen. Francisco Murguia, with a loss of 1,500 dead, wounded, and captured, and with the noted rebel leader, Martin Lopez, and another Villa general among the slain, according to an official report received here from the Carranza commander. Villa and his underchief, Salazar, were said to be fleeing toward El Valle in an automobile, closely pursued by government troops.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The state department instructed Charles J. Vopicka, American minister to the Balkan states, to leave Bucharest and take up his quarters at Jassy, the seat of the Rumanian government since the evacuation of Bucharest. The action of the department results from a protest by the German government against the retention of Mr. Vopicka in Bucharest. Berlin charges that the American minister is pro-ally in his sympathies; that he has been "perniciously active" in aiding the cause of the allies, and that he has caused much friction with the German authorities in Rumania.

PERSONAL PROPERTY.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—There is little doubt that any successful attempt to find and tax the actual personal property in this county will result, in the end, in no diminution of real estate taxes, but simply form another means of increasing the extravagance of government. Were it not for this general belief there would be a less gingerly coöperation on the part of the public.

To ask a taxpayer not to perjure himself, especially if he owns real estate and personal property likewise, would be ecuivalent to demanding he tell the truth to a burglar who has him by the throat asking where he put his wallet.

Mr. Jacobs asks the public to be fair and in return he will be fair, which seems to suggest that we perjure ourselves—not much, but just a little bit. Well, why be a piker when it comes to perjury? One must save enough to keep the help from joining the unemployed. And just how fair was Mr. Jacobs? He was not even a respecter of sworn statements.

It is now proposed to search the houses of the complainants for hidden property, overlooking the fact that those who had no reason to complain might make better material.

Eighty-five out of a great city's population are to be singled out for inspection simply because they complained and the board of appeals thought them justified. One hears the clank of chains and smells flesh burning.

The assessor is, at present, seeking power to examine banks and other sources of information for assessable property. What securities does he think will be left in the banks on the day of assessment? It is an easy prediction that there will be a run on trust accounts and deposits such as will shake the city off whatever foundations there still remain.

It is time for the people of this state to insist that government make drastic reductions in expenditures. They might start with Dr. Bundesen's birthday letters or his experiments with home brews and vintages, which, however reassuring, must be considered an absurd extravagance at the present time. They might take heed of the fact that education is useful only to the educable, and, for the great majority, reduce it to its erstwhile simple form. They might stop the extension of recreational facilities until the state can well afford to pay for them. They might better do some of these things than to tax some poor sucker out of his last melodeon.

JEREMIAH.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—It is perfectly obvious that the rich are the only ones who have personal property worth considering, and if they are able to escape an equitable tax upon it what is the poor man to do? The rich hate the income tax and on the surface pretend to accept the property tax; yet they manage to escape even this in Chicago, the citadel of the new feudalism. One is forced to the only conclusion. What the rich object to is not simply the income tax but the payment of a tax in any form. They clamor for and receive special protection, the best and most of municipal services. And all for nothing! For their invisible incomes already have freed them, for all practical purposes, from other forms of taxation. Again they prove themselves to be the inveterate tax dodgers and civic shirkers. There is, however, one consolation to be had. This incident is but another nail in the coffin of the present decaying social order, with the rich supplying the nail, hammer, and coffin. One wonders whether they are even dimly aware of what they are doing for themselves!

MELROSE PARK.

Melrose Park, Ill., Dec. 27.—Your continued attacks on the village of Melrose Park may be good policy from the standpoint of coloring the news to the taste of your average reader, but we believe that you are very inconsiderate of the great majority of citizens of our town.

In any number of instances we have been submitted to adverse and harmful publicity because of activities that were many miles removed from Melrose Park. In today's TRIBUNE you refer to a "killing in a Melrose Park roadhouse"; the place referred to is more than five miles north of our village and it is adjacent to other towns.

Perhaps it would be embarrassing for you to print a "beg your pardon" for every misstatement that has appeared regarding our village, but in the spirit of fair play please let your readers have this information: Melrose Park has seven churches, six schools, three Scout troops, active service clubs, a post of the American Legion that is a credit to the state, a great industrial center, one of the best suburban shopping districts, and thousands of good, substantial men and women who would be an asset to the best community, thousands of patriotic and law abiding citizens.

While you are training your big guns on crime, you should make an honest effort to avoid hitting innocent bystanders.

Melrose Park appeals to THE TRIBUNE for nothing more than a square deal.

ELMER F. PFLUG,
Secretary Melrose Park Chamber of Commerce.

ISLANDS FOR I O U'S.

Joliet, Ill., Dec. 30.—Every thinking person must realize that the time is not far distant when the American government must acquire all foreign owned islands adjacent to our shores. Why not buy them now, while prices are low, and not wait until such time as we may have to pay very heavily to get them?

In these days when a fleet of great bombing planes could fly from one of these islands and in an hour's time demolish one of our coast cities these foreign possessions in our waters offer a real threat to our security.

Our European friends who are now so hard up that they cannot pay even the small sums they owe us for interest on war debts would no doubt be delighted to sell these islands to our Uncle Boob at a good price. Sure, we should pay them for the islands—with their own worthless I O U's.

BOARD REFUSES TO REOPEN GOLD COAST TAX CASES

Tell Assessor They Must Have Evidence.

Fred W. Brummel and George F. Nixon, members of the board of tax appeals, yesterday informed Assessor J. L. Jacobs that they would take no steps to reopen the hearings at which 100 gold coast residents obtained reductions of more than $900,000 in their 1931 personal property tax assessments.

They told the assessor that if he would produce evidence showing that a complaining taxpayer had misrepresented the facts of his case or had failed to disclose all the evidence of his property to the board members the cases might be reheard. The board members asserted that the reductions which they granted last week were upon the recommendation of the assessor or his deputies.

Send Letter to Jacobs.

These facts were transmitted in a letter, which was made public yesterday by the board as it was being delivered to the assessor. In suggesting a procedure under which the assessor might reopen the hearings the board said:

"While there is no provision in the act creating the board of appeals which expressly empowers the board to grant rehearings, there is no provision which expressly prohibits such action.

"The board therefore suggests that in any case decided by the board, where the facts have been misrepresented or concealed, the county assessor file a petition in writing with the board, specifically alleging the facts concealed or misrepresented, and ask for a rehearing of the specific case. The board will pass upon the sufficiency of the petition and will then grant or deny a rehearing."

After reading the letter Assessor Jacobs said that the fact that the board insists upon declaring its hearings closed precluded him from taking any further action. He said that the 1931 books for the gold coast district are in the possession of the appeals board. Consequently, he said, any new appraisals he might make would have no standing.

Denies Board's Charge.

The assessor denied he had recommended the reductions granted by the appeals board. He said his deputy assessors had been assigned to the hearings only to aid the appeal board in determining how the assessor arrived at his valuations.

"An examination of my records shows that the reductions granted by the board were over my protest," said Assessor Jacobs. "In almost every one of the 100 cases an examination of the complaint by appraisers in my office had led to a written report back to the appeal board recommending no change in the protested assessments.

"I have told my men not to make any reductions of assessed valuations unless I personally pass upon the reduction and know the facts in the case. It is absurd for the appeals board to take the stand they do."

Dixon Reappraisal Case.

The assessor yesterday issued a statement asserting that George W. Dixon, 1250 Lake Shore drive, had never filed a complaint against his assessed valuation of personalty of $5,200 for 1931. The reappraisal of Mr. Dixon's home on Wednesday, the assessor said, was made after a neighbor had complained that Mr. Dixon's assessment and the assessments of two score other Gold Coast residents were considerably less than his own.

Freeman F. "Amos" Gosden, and Charles J. "Andy" Correll of radio fame yesterday were granted reductions to $1,906 and $1,665, respectively, by the assessor's office after their original personal tax schedules had been boosted. Correll had been assessed at $17,165 and Gosden at $17,456. The two entertainers produced a list of holdings for the assessor showing that all their investments were in Liberty bonds, which are not assessable, and that their tangible property was of small value.

GOVERNOR LEHMAN BUSY ON PLANS TO PREPARE FOR BEER

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Following up his recommendation to the legislature, Gov. Herbert Lehman assumed leadership today of official action to enable and regulate the sale of beer and distilled liquors in anticipation of favorable action by congress on the Collier beer bill and on the proposal for repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

The governor will send a special message to the senate and assembly next week, urging the creation of a commission to study the form state liquor control should take.

Gov. Lehman said that he favored empowering the commission also to investigate the new field for revenue that would be opened by the legalized sale of liquor.

SEEKS REMOVAL OF LA ROCHELLE AS TAX ATTORNEY

Courtney Asks County to End Contract.

State's Attorney Courtney recommended to the county board yesterday that it follow its action in terminating the contract under which Attorney Edward M. Winston was authorized to collect forfeited real estate taxes with similar action against a contract given to Attorney Lee La Rochelle to collect delinquent personal property taxes. The latter contract runs until June 1.

Attorney Winston, appearing before the board to defend his actions, which have been under fire by the commissioners for some weeks, was charged by Commissioner Walter J. LaBuy with having violated the terms of his contract in the majority of the court actions which he started.

Assailed by Commissioner.

"All the action which your contract permitted you to take was against real estate," Commissioner LaBuy, a lawyer, told Winston. "An examination of your record shows that you filed only 156 foreclosure suits against real estate for forfeited taxes, out of a total of 760 actions which you started. Suits in debt, which made up a majority of the remaining 604 cases, are against an individual and not against real estate, and were a distinct violation of your contract."

Winston, while his contract has been terminated, is fighting to be allowed to carry out the actions which he has already filed, on a contingent fee basis. He asserted that the validity of his contract had been sustained by the Appellate court when it was attacked by a defendant in one of his suits, but he admitted when Commissioner La Buy questioned him that the case in question was a real estate foreclosure and not an action for debt.

Charge Contract Violations.

Winston inherited the tax suit contract from an office associate, Attorney Henry M. Ashton, who made the original contract with the county board and then had to give it up because he was disbarred. In terminating Winston's contract the county board charged that he had violated his contract by compromising tax payments, which he was prohibited from doing under the terms of the contract, according to the board.

State's Attorney Courtney told the board that his office could handle all of the tax matters which had been intrusted to Winston and La Rochelle if the board would allow him an appropriation for two extra assistants. The board instructed him to submit a written opinion before it takes action on La Rochelle's case.

FIGHT BUYING ALL CHARITY COAL IN SOUTH ILLINOIS

Rival Operators Demand Share of Orders.

Indiana and central Illinois coal mine operators plan to carry their fight to bid on the Cook county charity coal contracts farther than the county board, which has adopted new specifications that restrict the bidding to operators in southern Illinois. This was the assertion of both groups of operators yesterday. They contend that the present specifications will permit price fixing on the part of the southern Illinois operators.

Seek to Block Awards.

W. J. O'Brien, who led the fight for the Indiana operators before the county board, and F. W. J. Sextro, who represented the central Illinois operators, said yesterday that they plan to act quickly to prevent the award of contracts under the present specifications next Tuesday, when the bids are due. They did not indicate the course their actions would take.

Assistant State's Attorney William A. Rittenhouse, who is conducting an investigation into charges that the seven former charity coal contractors substituted a cheaper grade of fuel than the contracts specified, yesterday announced that he would not wait much longer for a report on the audit of the books of F. Bieschke & Sons, one of the former contractors. The audit is being made by the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

May Ask Grand Jury's Aid.

Officials of the commission said the audit report would be given to Mr. Rittenhouse on Tuesday, but he did not receive it. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman of the commission, yesterday said the audit is not completed, but that it will be finished by the first of next week. Mr. Rittenhouse indicated that unless he is given the audit in a reasonable time he will ask for a grand jury subpoena.

Officials of the relief commission yesterday corrected data given by Samuel A. Goldsmith, director of the Jewish Charities, to the senate manufactures committee on Wednesday. Goldsmith was quoted in a dispatch as saying that there are 230,000 families on the relief rolls in Cook county. In reality there are about 175,000 families receiving relief, it was said.

CERMAK WANTS BEER SOLD IN SHOPS, CAFES, AND PICNIC GROVES

The sale of beer, when it is legalized by congress, should be permitted in all places selling food, including restaurants, beer gardens and picnic groves, Mayor Cermak declared yesterday. He made the statement on his return from Springfield, where the legislature authorized appointment of a committee to draft a bill giving cities and villages power to license the sale after the Volstead act is modified.

Installation of four huge storage tanks by the Prima company, part of a $200,000 purchase of new equipment made in anticipation of the legalization of beer, made it necessary yesterday to knock a hole 20 feet square in the wall of the company's main plant at Blackhawk and Halsted streets. The four tanks will give the company an added storage capacity of 5,000 to 6,000 barrels. The present storage capacity of the brewery, which now manufactures near beer, is 40,000 barrels.

Other equipment installed included two lines of new bottling machines. New equipment has also been put into the company's plant at 2450 Elston avenue. H. F. Ernst, president of the concern, said that the new equipment will increase the capacity of the brewery to 500,000 barrels a year and will enable it to turn out beer of 3.2 per cent alcoholic content by weight, the strength specified in the Collier bill now pending in the senate, at the rate of 2,000 barrels a day by March 1.

ACQUITS 'HEALER' OF VIOLATION OF MEDICAL LAWS

Judge Robert J. Dunne in the Municipal court yesterday acquitted Charles S. Burdick, who has offices at 550 Surf street, of a charge of violating the state medical practice act. Burdick was accused in a complaint filed by the state department of registration and education of illegally operating his machine, the "Neuroelectic Vitalizer," and treating patients without proper supervision. It was also charged that he was maintaining his office without a license. Judge Dunne in his decision said: "I am convinced that the defendant is not guilty as charged in the information."

ROB BUTTER AND EGG OFFICE.

Four armed men last night entered the offices of the Murphy Butter and Egg company, 3016 Calumet avenue, and forced three employés to surrender $100 from the cash drawer. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

HOAN DEMANDS SCRIP BE USED AT EARLY DATE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Mayor Daniel Hoan late today urged a special committee considering the issuance of scrip by the city to make an early report, "because delay in adoption of the plan means payless pay days for city employés," he said.

He wanted the plan ready for submission to the common council at its meeting Monday, but committee members said this would be impossible, because a public hearing must be held.

The mayor's defense of the scrip plan, which originally was suggested for Milwaukee by him, occurred at today's meeting of the special taxation and finance committee.

"The city expects $20,000,000 in taxes and assessments, and from water bills and other sources, to meet a 1933 budget of $31,000,000," said the mayor. "Without scrip it means payless pay rolls. The city plans to get as many relief measures as possible from the next legislature, but should issue scrip to relieve the situation now. If the city, as a result of legislation to be asked of the state, is able to borrow enough from the banks to meet financial obligations as they come due, we can discontinue the issuance of scrip at short notice."

The mayor said he planned to call a meeting of all department heads to discuss the scrip plan. He will advise them to tell their employés, he said, to offer 70 per cent cash and 30 per cent scrip for purchases and not to accept less than cash value for the scrip. If some merchants refuse to accept scrip at face value, he continued, the employés should refuse to trade with them.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The wedding anniversary celebrated Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dawson, 321 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park, was their 46th, and not their 50th anniversary, as was stated on Wednesday. It was also erroneously stated that Mr. Dawson had been engaged in the wholesale dry goods trade, instead of in the wholesale drug trade.

CLEAR NO. SHORE AUTO DEALER IN $50,000 LOVE SUIT

A jury in the court of Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady at Waukegan yesterday found August C. Haak, automobile dealer of Highland Park, not guilty in a $50,000 breach of promise suit filed by Miss Florence C. Olson, 20 years old, of 1155 Olive street.

Miss Olson testified that in September, 1930, while she was a student at the Deerfield High school, she met Haak. He wooed her, she said, under the name of Gregor McGuire, and promised to marry her and take her to California to live.

"He said he was one of the wealthy McGuires of Chicago," she continued. "He took me riding forty-three times in three months. Then I learned he was already married."

Haak admitted using the name McGuire, but asserted he had been out with Miss Olson only six times. He denied ever promising to marry her.

Everybody has bought dates of the dried variety from the grocer. But how many of you have tried asking your fresh fruit salesman for dates?

If you have not, you have a treat in store for you, for we are right now in the midst of a season of fresh dates which come plump, full formed and unsticky from California to our markets and which we are assured will be with us all winter long.

All of which should set the curious householder to asking—why haven't we had fresh dates before very recent years? How does one serve them?

Fresh from California.

And here are the answers. For centuries, fresh dates have been one of the chief foods of those who sweltered in the desert regions of the old world, but none of these fresh dates reached this country, since fresh dates are perishable and don't enjoy traveling. Therefore, until recently, only dried dates reached this country. Then, not very many years ago, scientists discovered that a small valley in California had just the happy combination of hot temperature and abundant water to grow the best fresh dates—even better than the drier regions in the old world. Gradually planting and crops are increasing until we are receiving this year 2 million pounds of one of the most tempting and versatile fruits we can purchase—fresh dates.

As for fresh date uses—they are similar and quite as numerous as the ways of using other sweet, lush fruits. Being perishable, only as many as can be eaten in a week or so should be bought at one time. They may be offered in a bowl on the bridge table or at any meal, or may be safely left to preside on the side board to supply safe between meal sweets. You may combine them with other fruits—fresh or preserved—in fruit cups and cocktails, salads and desserts. Or for a luncheon tid bit, replace the pits with small lumps of sweet butter or honey butter and serve them up with bread and milk.

May Be Halved or Diced.

When adding fresh dates to salads or other dishes calling for fresh fruit, they may be pitted and halved or diced coarsely with scissors. If small pieces are desired, run the dates through a food chopper. Immerse scissors or chopper in very hot water before using to avoid sticking.

A thousand salads offer themselves as honored to receive fresh dates in their midst. A special delicacy of dates and cream cheese balls embalmed coolly in lemon gelatine and cupped in crisp lettuce does enormous things to one's appetite. Or serve fresh dates stuffed with cream cheese, nuts, or both as a garnish for fresh pear salad.

In the dessert line again wonders may be wrought. Fresh dates combine happily with all fruits—especially those with an acid flavor, and, being sweet in themselves, they furnish an especially satisfying "topping off" course. Gelatine desserts take on new character when this new-old fruit is added, and a most delectable treat calling to mind the delicacy of "marron glace" rewards one for including minced fresh dates in vanilla ice cream.

APPLE-DATE ICE BOX CAKE.

¾ cup sugar.
1½ tablespoon butter.
1 teaspoon corn starch.
3 eggs, separated.
Juice of 1 lemon.
2-3 cups chopped fresh dates.
3½ dozen lady fingers.

Combine the first four ingredients and the egg yolks and cook in a double boiler till thickened, stirring constantly. Add the lemon juice and let partially cool. Then fold in the beaten egg whites and the dates. You will need for this cake a spring form mold or a deep cake pan. Line it with lady fingers, place a layer of them on the bottom, and cover with a layer of the filling. Alternate layer of lady fingers and filling until the pan is filled. The top layer of lady fingers should be placed like the spokes of a wheel. Place in the refrigerator and let stand twenty-four hours. Remove the sides of the form and pile sweetened, flavored whipped cream over the top. Serve in wedges.

Here Are Some New Ideas for That Frozen Dessert

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

Nothing so much inspires an artist as artistry. In the winter, then, when the panes between the blue velvet window draperies are hung with silvery frost etchings, it is not surprising—when dessert is brought in from the pantry—that the candlelight on our dinner table should glint on small filigree spires and icy domes of artistic delicacy and deliciousness.

After the substantial foods which ordinarily make up the first courses of our cold weather dinners, the frozen dessert comes as a veritable benediction of delight. In these days of trim waistlines and slim silhouettes tho rich and warm pies and puddings that set our guests tussling with drowsiness before the fireplace a decade or two ago are slowly but surely going the way of the tufted, gilt lettered family album, the stereoscope, and the wax flowers under the glass dome on the parlor table.

Expert Gives Some Advice.

The modern hostess who favors the light, dainty frozen desserts and, incidentally, after dinner conversation as bright and graceful as the sparks that dance above the log on her hearth, is offered an excellent suggestion by W. E. Ayers of the department of dairy industry at Cornell university. Crush graham crackers and stir them into your vanilla ice cream just before you pack it into the ice and salt to harden or grind peanut brittle or peppermint stick candy in the food chopper and introduce it in the same manner, Mr. Ayers counsels.

Our interest has been aroused by a recent bulletin on ice creams from the New York state colleges of agriculture and home economics. It suggests that black or English walnuts, well roasted almonds, raisins with a little clove or even nutmeg be added to the cream, with or without flavoring material, taste being the only agent necessary for determining the proper balances.

Another Suggestion.

Or ice cream colored with a bit of green coloring and flavored with wintergreen and with a few small red wintergreen candies scattered on the top of each dish just before serving constitutes another intriguing dessert possibility.

A final grace note of perfection for the winter dinner, however, is the ice cream into which pieces of nougat well filled with bits of marshmallow have been stirred.

AVOCADO, ONCE A LUXURY, FINDS LARGER MARKET

Flavor Wins It Favor for Use in Salads.

BY EVERETT SWINGLE.

Once a high priced luxury, the avocado now is getting so plentiful that producers are asking that the uninitiated sample it in any of its various table forms. Once only the elite could buy it or knew of its bland taste.

The avocado is known by other names. You may call it an alligator pear, of which it is said to be a descendant. Some dealers call it the "tree vegetable." It is best identified by its green skin and the large stone in the center.

Grown in Southern California.

By pounds the American avocado crop to be harvested this year is about equal to that of last year. About five million pounds are to be picked in the avocado groves along the coast of Southern California, where production centers. Not only has production been increased extensively in the last few years, but growers report that additional acreage within the next few years will double the present annual harvest.

The avocado is found an admirable fruit for salads. One avocado ordinarily suffices for a salad in an average size family. The reason is that other fruits are usually blended in to capitalize on the delicate flavor the avocado introduces.

Three Recipes Are Given.

JELLIED AVOCADO SALAD.

1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
1 cup boiling water
2 cups mashed avocado pulp
½ teaspoon salt
Juice of half a lemon
¼ cup cold water

Soak the gelatin in cold water and dissolve in the boiling water. Add the fruit pulp, salt, and lemon juice. Mold and chill until firm. When ready to serve, unmold on bed of lettuce, garnish with mayonnaise, and strips of pimiento.

AVOCADO AND GRAPEFRUIT SALAD.

Peel avocado and remove stone. Cut pulp in thin wedge-shaped pieces. Section a grapefruit, removing all the membrane. Then arrange sections of grapefruit and wedges of avocado alternately on a bed of lettuce pinwheel fashion. Serve with a tart French dressing or lime dressing.

AVOCADO PEAR SANDWICHES.

Peel avocado and remove stone. Grind up 4 or 5 large ripe olives, stalk of celery, and a few pecans and combine with the avocado pulp which has been mashed to a paste. Season with mayonnaise and a little lemon juice. Spread on toasted white bread, arrange a crisp piece of lettuce and cover with another piece of toast.

HERE'S A THRIFTY DISH CONTAINING VARIETY OF FOOD

American kedgeree furnishes a thrifty way to give husbands and children the foods they need in a way they like. It contains so many different foods that merely by adding a salad, bread and butter, a fruit dessert, and milk for the children it makes a well balanced family meal.

1 pint diced potatoes [cooked]
1 pint kidney beans [cooked]
2 hard cooked eggs
1 medium size onion
1 teaspoon curry powder [if desired]
1 teaspoon lemon juice or vinegar
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon fat or oil

Chop the onion fine, brown it in the fat, add the curry powder and lemon juice; cook the mixture five minutes; add the potato, the beans and the chopped white of the eggs. Heat it all in a stew pan or baking dish and serve with the top covered with the yolk of the eggs passed through a sieve.

TRY BEAN ROAST AS SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT DISH

Example of Economy Set in New England.

BY FLORA MARTIN.

Housewives who want to make their menus as attractive as possible and yet inexpensive will do well to follow the example of the thrifty New Englanders, who make much of the dried bean. Of course, the name of New England has long been linked with Boston baked beans, but that is only one of the many bean dishes prepared in the east.

An appetizing recipe for bean roast is suggested by the New York state college of home economics at Cornell university for a dinner when the grocery fund is running low. It's made as follows:

BEAN ROAST.

1½ cups of dry kidney beans
2 teaspoons of salt
1 to 2 cups of grated cheese
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup of bread crumbs
½ cup of milk

Soak the beans for 24 hours in enough water to cover them, then cook until they are soft in fresh water in which the salt has been dissolved. Drain, chop or mash and add onion, cheese, bread crumbs, more salt if desired, and enough milk to moisten. Form the mass into a loaf and bake it in a moderate oven, 350 to 400 degrees Fahrenheit, for 40 minutes.

A raw cabbage salad or cole slaw, whole wheat bread and baked apples and perhaps milk would fit in well as dinner companions for the bean roast.

Another roast of beans, this time lima beans, which makes a filling and substantial hot dish, can be concocted from the following recipe contributed by Mrs. Kathryn B. Niles of the home economics division, Minnesota college of agriculture, University Farm, St. Paul.

LIMA BEAN ROAST.

2 cups cooked lima beans
1 cup diced potatoes—raw
1 onion
½ tablespoon ham or bacon fat
¼ to ½ green pepper
2 teaspoons finely chopped parsley
1 cup bean stock
salt

Slice the onion and brown it in the fat. Add the other ingredients. Put the mixture into a baking dish; add stock or water and bake in a moderate oven about one hour. If necessary, add water during the baking to keep the mixture from drying. Tomato sauce can be used when serving.

Household Hints

A hot dish for the child's school lunch improves his health, disposition, and often his grades.

When the family has pumpkin pie for dessert bake some of the filling in a custard cup for each child.

A bouillon cube gives an added flavor to soups and gravies. It may also be added to cream sauces for vegetables.

Cranberry jelly may be sliced and cut into fanciful shapes to make an attractive garnish for salads and deserts. Cookie cutters may be used for cutting.

Chopped dates, figs, or raisins in the breakfast cereal, or a little shaved maple sugar on it sometimes turn a child's reluctant frown into a smile and then he empties the dish.

Dried fruits make good sweets for children because they contain valuable minerals and the sugar is not in too concentrated a form.

Prevent colds by building up a resistance against them by eating foods rich in vitamin A such as milk, cream, butter, cheese, leafy vegetables, eggs, and codliver oil.

It is much easier to find small kitchen utensils such as egg beaters and strainers that hang on the wall than those that lie on a shelf or in a drawer among other utensils.

AND MORE, too, when it comes to Eatmor Cranberries, because one pound of fresh cranberries will make more than two pounds of the famous ten-minute cranberry sauce that is so good with all meats or poultry.

"10-Minute" Cranberry Sauce
(Stewed Cranberries)

1 pound or quart (4 cups) cranberries, 2 cups water, 1½ to 2 cups sugar. Boil sugar and water together 5 minutes; add cranberries and boil without stirring (5 minutes is usually sufficient) until all the skins pop open. Remove from the fire when the popping stops, and allow the sauce to remain in vessel undisturbed until cool.

Edith Olivier Violates Rules in New Book

Fails to Prepare Reader for Tragedies.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Mr. Chilvester's Daughters," by Edith Olivier. [Viking.] Published today.

EDITH OLIVIER has written some delightful books—"Dwarf's Blood," "The Love Child," and that charming absurdity "The Triumphant Footman." They have much of the quality of delicate wax flowers beneath a glass bell, which are more Victorian than almost any other single example of the age. They have the vitality of weakness—like the hold which ladies of the Victorian period had upon their families through their fragility. There is delicacy and something a little ironic about them, as if those fragile ladies of a past day were winking at the spectator over the heads of their kneeling suitors.

EDITH OLIVIER.

Whether Miss Olivier wrote about a love child literally created out of air by the longing of an old maid for a child, or about a footman who gaily stepped up the ladder to great social heights, or about a dwarf who wrecked his parents' marriage and then repaired the wreckage, the tenor of all her novels has been the tenor of Victorianism faintly tinged with satire.

The tenor of "Mr. Chilvester's Daughters" is in the main the same as its predecessors. It has the same quality of fragility that the others have had. But while the others have had the strength of a sturdy fragility, this last one has nothing but its delicacy. There is somehow lacking that irresistible appeal which delicacy has upon the stronger. Incidentally that appeal has been the theme of countless novels and more plays. "The Stronger," "Candida," leap to the mind at once. There is no questioning the fact that weakness has at times a violent and tragic power which strength lacks.

And for an author to use weakness consciously for its power over her readers—not in theme but in the method of her writing—is skill of high parts. Always before this Miss Olivier has succeeded in her difficult technique. Now she has to my mind definitely failed. "Mr. Chilvester's Daughters" is a weak work of art.

It concerns a Mr. Chilvester who worships his house—in the Cathedral close—as his neighbors worship their god. In it two women have borne him daughters and died of either their ordeal or the drains [or lack of them]. In it two daughters, one a room-bound invalid and the other a girl who is as house-bound, are alive as the book opens. When the book closes Mr. Chilvester has attained the reward of his crochets, one daughter has died in a melodramatic rescue of her sister and the other is considering a visit to her grandmother [also on her deathbed] to find out what she (at 20) really wants from life.

Throughout the book, until almost the last pages, the tone is gayish. There is little preparation by the author for its tragedies. All of the elements of the tragedies are inherent in the characters but not in the mood in which the author has written about those characters, and such shifting of fundamentals in writing a novel is, to my mind, no matter how charming the superstructure, reprehensible.

"Mr. Chilvester's Daughters" has, at times, a really charming superstructure. The Cathedral close and its mystic influence on the daughter who lives in the attic is definitely well done. The wife of the Dean—who appears seldom—is convincing. Some of the time Mr. Chilvester comes alive, but most of the time he is a still life. Oftener than not Christopher is consistent and gay and attractive to the reader. But as a whole the book is a fragile and an unconvincing piece of work.

Speaking of the Victorian era, Stanley J. Weyman was the high priest of historical romance in those days, and how many of you even remember his name? Up with your hands! Ah-hah, just as I suspected. Only one little boy in the class, and he used to read "Under the Red Robe" behind his geography. Stanley Weyman is a swell swashbuckling writer of swell swashbuckling tales, and to prove it his publishers [Longmans Green] have issued a volume called "Historical Romances," which offers to the reader the complete text of three of the most popular of the Weyman thrills, "A Gentleman of France," "Count Hannibal," and "Under the Red Robe."

There's nothing a bit Victorian about another book published this week, "Dangerous Corner" [Doubleday Doran]. It is a novelization of the play by J. B. Priestley, which has been delighting London audiences—you remember reading about it, a play in which the truth was suddenly and disastrously though inadvertently let loose at a pleasant dinner party. In Victoria's reign such truths were seldom uttered though often lived. Mr. Priestly and Ruth Holland have made an intriguing novel of the play.

U. of C. Fraternities Ask Permission to Have Women Guests

Thomas Andrews, president of Kappa Sigma fraternity at the University of Chicago, yesterday presented a petition to the university council of administration asking permission for fraternities to admit women students to their houses during the evenings. He suggested that the fraternity members be allowed to have women guests in for dinner and bridge on school nights, the women to leave by 8 p. m., and that on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings women guests be allowed in the houses until midnight. Women are barred from the houses at present, except for dances.

Hear Splendid Concert; Boost Music Temple

Hamill Makes Appeal at Thomas Memorial.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

"He had a vision," said Charles J. Hamill, president of the Orchestral association, speaking from the stage of Orchestra hall last night during the intermission of the Chicago Symphony orchestra concert and referring to Frederick Stock, its conductor. "He sees something he wants, not for himself but for the art he serves. It is the new Music building on the lake front. After this magnificent performance, is there any one who is not willing to give it to him?"

Apparently there were not many, for dollar subscriptions sold swiftly during the few remaining minutes of the intermission.

Mr. Hamill made his appeal at a peculiarly timely occasion. This was the annual concert to the memory of Theodore Thomas, founder and first conductor of the orchestra. It is something of which Thomas himself would have been heart and soul in favor. For Orchestra hall was also built by public subscription. Thomas had labored for it for years. It was finally finished, he moved in, started its activities, and then died.

Thus a great career came to an end, a culmination so fine that even Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben," the last number on the program, only faintly echoed in tone the drama that Thomas created out of life.

Now has come the time for a new building, not to displace Orchestra hall but to augment it, and its heroic founder would be the first to see the necessity. There should be a place where there can be summer music as a supplement to the magnificent winter music at Orchestra hall.

Mr. Stock conceived the idea, as Mr. Hamill said. Part of the idea is that 100,000 Chicagoans shall contribute one dollar each to the erection of the building. So all the Chicagoans who are pouring their individual dollars into the enterprise, and they are pouring them rapidly just now, will be Mr. Stock's partners, and their names will be inscribed upon the walls in token thereof. There is no denying that one is entitled to a feeling of pride at being associated in such a manner. The Friends of Music, who are the active solicitors to the 100,000 Chicagoans, have already more than justified themselves and will continue to do so.

Lest it be forgotten, the work that called out Mr. Hamill's praise was Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Its performance was all he said and more. It was preceded by Wagner's "A Faust Overture" and followed, as just stated, by Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben."

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

MURDER IN THE GARDEN.

The only marks on the body were deep bruises on the beautiful white throat made with powerful fingers. Strangled. The professor was baffled.

It seemed such a senseless crime! Who could have killed this charming, unsophisticated girl out of a convent only a month? A thorough probing failed to disclose the slightest motive. Fordney had come to the conclusion it was the work of a homicidal maniac, when Sergt. Reynolds pushed into the room, the family cook, Hip Ling.

"The chauffeur says he saw this Chink lurking in the garden shortly before the girl was murdered last night. I'm going to take his prints and see if we have them at headquarters."

As the Chinaman's hand was pressed to the pad, Fordney observed the lithe strength of the man, the long-nailed powerful fingers, the unusual reach of the arms. He also noticed he was left-handed. The traditional imperturbability of the oriental, however, was lacking. Here was a badly frightened, greatly excited, wildly gesticulating Chinaman!

Loudly he proclaimed his innocence. He admitted being in the garden waiting to meet a smuggler who had agreed to bring his brother into the country. Nothing could induce him, however, to name this man. Fear of the tongs, he said. When he stated he had seen no one but Miss Hazel, who for a long time, stood silently staring up at the stars, Reynolds let out a yell and slapped the cuffs on him.

"You don't believe him, eh, Sergt.?" inquired Fordney. "Well, stars WERE shining last night. No, Ling didn't murder the girl!"

HOW DID FORDNEY KNOW?

[See solution on page 29.]

Resort Clothes Give Hint of Future Styles

Display Smart Suits at Fashion Shows.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Fashion shows never grow stale. Clever shop keepers can stage them at practically any time and be assured of a thrilled and palpitating audience. Its the one thing that pulls every shopper to a store of a cold, or warm, morning and keeps them interested in a grand buying mood.

But, unquestionably the most tantilising fashion shows are the ones that you wander into during this midseason . . . the shows where slim young things model the new suits, the crisp cottons, the fascinating sports costumes for active and spectator wear, the colorful resort and winter vacation clothes that make every appraising and protential buyer writhe with envy over the lucky souls who can get out of town.

Even though you remain in town these first fine collections do thrill you, besides giving you a fine forecast of what will be what next spring. You'll see the smart tailored suits, with faultlessly tailored lines, the short, slim jackets with pockets, wide lapels, buttons, and a lot of sparkling white pique for stunning contrast.

You'll see the bias cut plaid cotton or silk suit blouses that are made with wind around scarf collars . . . you'll see the swanky black silk suits that have tops of white embroidered organdy and the afternoon frocks that use stiff white organdy for frilled cuffs and frilled collars.

Necklines are most important . . . all of them hug the throat . . . some new models have double ruffed necklines that look like a Pierrot collar. Most of the black afternoon dresses go in for rib hugging detachable capes or cape coats.

It's going to be another practical year, with plenty of double duty clothes and costumes that a clever clothes hound can transform with extra scarfs, colored jackets, and separate blouses.

Cape collectors are going to lose their hearts to the new capes . . . most of them are infinitely becoming, just long enough to be dasling and daring, and you sling a cape over the shoulders of almost every frock, and grown in your wardrobe. Smart new knitted clothes are caped . . . silk dresses are caped . . . fuzzy angoras and rabbit's wool dresses for daytime wear have deep swinging capes to nonchalantly hang over a fashion wise shoulder.

The checks and plaids are here to stay . . . these cheerful though sometime giddy plaids and checks are used for shirts, sleeveless one piece dresses to be worn with a dark coat or jacket, and silk checks are used for coat facings, collar and cuffs. One knockout black suit of comparatively soft thin wool is an eye filling creation because of the dramatic gray white and black plaid silk contrast that covers the wide lapels, ascot collar and turn over cuffs.

One new color combination that will cause a flutter or two is the dusty pink and powder blue combine . . . you see this combination in sports clothes, in daytime dresses and in some of the most beautiful evening gowns you have ever raved about. And don't forget the yellow arrivals . . . yellow sweaters, knitted dresses, yellow silk daytime dresses and all kinds of sunny yellow cotton frocks for warm weather. The passing fashion shows can give you a grand idea of what you will want to wear all next spring or summer . . . try them and see!

THE STAGE

The leading rôles in "Robin Hood," with which the Chicago Operetta company will begin a series of productions at the Civic Opera house on Jan. 15, will be sung by Lorna Doone Jackson and Greek Evans. Miss Jackson is an opera singer of extensive experience and has toured the country as a star in the contralto rôle of "Robin Hood." She was a member of the Chicago Opera company for several years. Mr. Evans is a tenor of the opera and concert stage and recently appeared in an eastern revival of the De Koven-Smith classic.

Ben Jerome, well known in Chicago as a composer and musical director, has been engaged to lead the orchestra. He has served the St. Louis Municipal Opera company in a similar capacity. The stage director of the organization will be Charles Sinclair, who was associated with Henry W. Savage's productions of "Parsifal" and "Mme. Butterfly." He is also an alumnus of the summer operetta seasons in St. Louis.

George M. Cohan's latest play, called "Pigeons and People," will have a New York premiere at the Sam H. Harris theater on Jan. 16. The performance, running two hours and ten minutes, will not be interrupted by intermissions. In other words, this is a full length play in one act. Mr. Cohan's company will include Walter Gilbert, Paul McGrath, Edward F. Nannery, Reynolds Denniston, Olive Reeves-Smith, Lucille Sears, Janet Rathbun, and Howard Hull Gibson.

George Kondolf, impresario of "Springtime for Henry," which ends its run at the Blackstone theater tomorrow night, announces that he intends to stage two plays in Chicago during the period of A Century of Progress. Gavin Muir, who has one of the leading rôles in "Springtime for Henry," will be associated with him in the venture. Kondolf's next production, to be made in the east in association with William A. Brady, will be a drama called "Hangman's Whip," written by Norman R. Raine and Frank Butler.

"The Du Barry," an operetta now running in New York with Grace Moore in its title rôle, is a prospect for the spring theatrical season in Chicago. The piece has a score by Carl Millocker, the Viennese composer whose light operas were famous forty and fifty years ago. Its libretto has been modernized. C. C.

Shows on Broadway Announce New Cuts in Admission Prices

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Broadway theaters have entered another wave of price slashing with three of the outstanding shows announcing reductions in their admission prices this week.

"Flying Colors," the Max Gordon revue which has been playing for 15 weeks, shaved its scale of prices 50 per cent, with the former top price of $4.40 now being $2.20.

"Music in the Air," an operetta hit, has reduced its top admission from $4.40 to $3.85.

The most surprising price cutting was announced for the dramatic play, "Girls in Uniform." Although the critical reviews were unanimous in praise of the show, the day after its premiere the management announced that its $3 orchestra seats would be reduced to $2.

Engagement of Mary Fortune to W. J. Lawlor Jr. Announced

BY JUDITH CASS.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN L. FORTUNE of 1451 Astor street made announcement last night at a dinner for their family and a few close friends of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Fortune, to William J. Lawlor Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Lawlor of 3100 Sheridan road.

Miss Fortune has been prominent in younger social circles since she made her debut in the fall of 1929 at a tea at her parents' residence. Before her introduction to society she attended the Chicago Latin School for Girls and the Bennett school at Millbrook, N. Y. She is active in the Junior league, Service club and other philanthropic organizations. Mr. Lawlor was graduated from Georgetown university.

The Fortune family residence in Astor street, where all of the seven Fortune children were born, is a gay and popular gathering place for young people of varying ages. John L. Fortune Jr., who was graduated from Princeton a year ago, is the oldest of the children. The other "grown-up" young Fortunes, besides Miss Mary, who is next in age to John, are Peter, who is at Princeton now, and Miss Jane Fortune, who is slender, dark-haired and pretty like her older sister, and who made her debut last season.

The following women have been asked to pour at the Arts club tea this afternoon to open an exhibition of paintings by Claude Monet and the Isabel Carleton Wilde collection of early American folk painting: Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, Mrs. Anna L. Stacey, Mrs. Increase Robinson, Mrs. Potter Palmer Jr., Mrs. John R. Winterbotham Jr., Miss Agnes Foreman, Miss Alice Gerstenberg, Mrs. Herbert E. Bradley, Mrs. Duncan Hodges, Mrs. John Nef, Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett, Miss Emily Larned, Mrs. R. Townsend McKeever, Mrs. Shreve C. Badger, and Mrs. Robert M. Hutchins. Mrs. Potter Palmer is chairman of the reception committee.

Emerson House Benefit Tonight.

The young members of the board of Emerson House who are sponsoring a benefit supper dance this evening at the Congress hotel have had much anxiety over the fact that many of the invitations to the ball—sent out for reasons of economy in unsealed envelopes with one and one-half cent postage—either were lost in the mail or thrown in the waste basket with advertisements by the people to whom they were sent.

In order to remedy this, the president, Mrs. Louis C. Sudler, is urging all the friends of Emerson House to come to the dance this evening whether or not they have invitations.

There is no doubt that the benefit will be a gay affair, with three contests of the sort that invariably enliven any party. Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin and Michael Barlett are to be judges of a dance contest of tangoes, fox trots, and waltzes; Alla Nazimova, Odette Myrtle, and Bettina Hall will award a prize to the best dressed woman present, and Henry Hull will present a golden apple to the woman he selects as the most beautiful.

Many of the guests at the dinner dance that Mrs. Henry H. Porter is giving at the Casino tonight for her three daughters-in-law, Mrs. Henry H. Porter Jr., Mrs. Sartell Prentice Porter, and Mrs. John Pierrepont Porter, will go to the Emerson House dance along toward midnight.

Among the Dutch treat dinner parties to be held before the dance are those arranged by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Conway H. Olmsted, Miss Margaret Carr, Miss Peggy Hambleton, Miss Eleanor McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Silvertone Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Augustus W. Eddy.

Miss Elizabeth Chase and Miss Josephine Patterson left at noon yesterday to join Miss Patterson's sister, Mrs. Joseph Brooks, in New York. The trio will sail tomorrow on the

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we give our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

Many homes will receive new furniture in the next few months and often radiators will be found to be taking up valuable space where the new furniture could be placed. Your plumbing contractor can give you good advice on the changing of a radiator's location. Or again some of your radiators may be a bit ungainly and old fashioned. He can suggest changes to types that are smaller, perhaps, and more efficient, not to mention a lot better looking. This won't be as much of a job as you think and, considering present low prices, you may be much surprised at how little it will cost compared to "other days."

BARTER AND SAIL

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Hiram White sails his four masted ship, the Abigail White, in search of a ship filled with pearl oysters, sunk by a French captain before the world war in a lagoon in a south sea island. Arlette Mordecai, the French captain's granddaughter, has brought him complete instructions for finding the ship. Arlette is accompanied by an English woman of title, known as Ladybird. In his crew are Adam Eden, an unemployed engineer; an unemployed French chauffeur named Raoul Roberts Milbanke, and Peter Calvan. Roberts's father died after his bank failed and Peter was his trusted employe. Benny, a cook, drew up for his keep. Henery Shepard, backer of the venture, fills the boat with a cargo of his own choosing and plans to stop at certain ports to trade cargoes. Ladybird, who is a naval officer's daughter, is made mate. Henery makes profitable trades at Cape Town, Sydney, Australia, and Japan. Then the ship sails to the island where the sunken treasure craft is located. Capt. Hiram, Adam and Peter take turns diving for the oysters. They have been on board when they are beset by a ruffianly crew of a strange yacht, headed by Capt. Derring, who turns out to be Ladybird's husband and aware of the sunken treasure. He demands the oysters and diving rig. Peter, knowing the oysters contain no pearls and that the girls must be protected, advises giving them up, which Roberts interprets as yellowness. Capt. Hiram agrees with Peter. Derring boards the four master and orders his yacht to tow it out to sea, where the shell is transferred. Then Derring starts trouble.

INSTALLMENT XLI.

A DEEP SEA TRAGEDY.

They lurched over and against the rail. Derring's body began to rise. Peter realized what was happening and, still gripping the barrel of the shotgun, thrust upward with all his strength. Derring loosed his hold of it and clutched at Benny's brawny forearms. Peter might have brained him with the weapon, but made no such attempt. He stepped back, panting heavily. The next moment Derring was up and over the rail.

He landed in the water with a swash, went under a few feet, then rose a little farther astern as the schooner was forereaching slowly. His small boat was still hanging on alongside at the foot of the sea ladder that had been put over farther forward, in the waist. The native still in it was casting off his painter to pick up Derring when there came a yell from the pearling yacht that was still close aboard with her engines turning over slowly.

Those aboard the Abigail saw a huge dim shadow drift up under Derring from the blue depths. The great monster had already sampled the jetsam thrown overboard by Benny. Its belly gleamed as it rolled lazily on its side as if to savor this delicacy of living flesh offered it after the hors d'oeuvre of putrid meat that had proved so palatable.

Derring may have seen this dull glare from the sun's reflection on the pallid underbody on the shark, or perhaps he felt the suction of the water from its close passage under him. Also the sudden clamor from the yacht had warned him. He looked down, then gave a horrid strangling cry, and began to beat the water violently with his cupped hands and to splash it with his feet.

Capt. Hiram raised his big revolver, sighted on the tip of the shark's fin, and fired. It was a good shot, the bullet striking perhaps four inches to the right. But the only effect it had was to send the shark a little deeper so that the fin was submerged and to increase its speed. The excitement of a rapacious desire seemed suddenly to possess the monster.

Capt. Hiram looked back over his shoulder and saw Ladybird come to the open door of the cabin.

It would not do to let her witness this most shocking spectacle one can behold—the seizure and devouring of a living human being by a predatory monster. Capt. Hiram did not wish to witness it himself. In such a case, whatever their quarrel or hatred, the human must be allied against the beast—the higher order against the lower. There was nothing more that could be done. Inexorable Destiny was working out its pattern. Tying off a knot, Capt. Hiram strode across the deck, laid his hand on Ladybird's shoulder, and thrust her back into the cabin, then reached over and unhooked the door, stepped in himself and slammed the door behind him.

The slam of the heavy door was nicely timed to keep Ladybird from hearing Derring's anguished scream as the huge maw severed him into separate fragments. Some naturalists insist on telling us that sharks never attack and devour swimming men, but in the Pacific ocean there are a multitude of sharks that for ages have ignored such erudite instruction.

"Henery and Benny hove Derring overboard."

"I know that. What happened then? Did Adam shoot him . . . in the water . . . ?"

"No." He put his arm around her and drew her still closer. "I fired at the fin of a big shark swimming toward him." She had better know the truth, he thought.

Fine shudders rippled through Ladybird's taut body. For the moment she had ceased entirely to be the mate of a brave ship and felt herself to be the mate of a brave man. She was a dread stricken woman in need of strong support.

It is probable that the pearler crew considered themselves well out of a very ugly business by the sudden removal of a man whom none of them could by this time have cherished greatly. Whatever their findings in the matter, they swung off and headed away from the place to a more promising pearl prospect, perhaps, and one for which at least they were now much better equipped.

Capt. Hiram was obliged to drop his mizzen sail to get his schooner filled away and he did not breathe easier until well clear of the atoll.

At sunset the breeze dropped. Nobody had discussed the tragedy. Ladybird had gone about with a set, inscrutable face.

Then to their surprise Adam proposed a conference. It was the first time he had ever taken initiative in the deliberations about their movements.

They gathered on the quarter deck with the Abigail flat becalmed and the big sails flapping heavily in the long swell.

"What's on your mind, Adam?" Capt. Hiram asked, frowning. He did not want any reference made to what had happened.

"Just this, sir. I hate to quit the place without being certain in my mind that Mr. Mordecai knew nothing about that shell being worked."

Capt. Hiram said wearily: "We've been over all that. But if it will be of any comfort you can all have a look at the little we got for directions."

He went into his cabin and got the two pages that Arlette had supplied. Adam studied them, then shook his head.

"Not much to help here," and handed them to Peter. "Suppose you read them aloud."

Peter did so. The diary from which the pages were torn had been a long narrow book to fit the pocket. The directions were written in a clear, clerical hand, and those on page 57 appeared as follows:

"The sunk auxiliary lighter rests in middle of lagoon opposite the entrance and under about seven fathoms very clear water. She is easily visible in a good light. Perhaps you can raise her and even get her good new engines running. It needs heavy gear to lift her to the surface. Make every effort at your command to salvage this staunch sound vessel. Pearls I have taken from this lagoon often run well over 40 pearl grains, excellently shaped, with finest lustre. Study my directions from every angle or you may fail entirely."

Chap Plays Role of Cad in Life of One He Wooed

BY DORIS BLAKE.

He signs himself "Just a Cad," proving there's some tiny spark struggling for life in his otherwise pretty mean soul.

He knew the girl, "Ruth," for a long time. Admired her. Took her out some—but not exclusively. One evening when he asked her to go out she responded frankly with a confession of her love for "Dick," another chap. "I love 'Dick' so," she told "Jack," "I'll never go out with anybody else."

Right then and there, "Jack" tells, he decided "Ruth" would be his girl if he had to move heaven and earth to get her to care. Which would have been fair enough, if his means of pursuit had not been foul.

"Dick" lost his job suddenly, but the girl stood by with courage and cheer. "Jack" made it his business to see "Dick" during this period and impress upon him the unfairness of taking up a girl's time with such bleak prospects ahead. "Jack" admits to doing it suavely, pleading "Ruth's" case rather than his own.

"Finally, my point was won," "Just a Cad" tells. "He stopped calling or seeing "Ruth." Naturally, she was dumfounded. She asked me if I knew what was the matter. Pleading my own cause, I said: 'If he were truly in love with you he'd hang around.'"

After a time "Ruth," not hearing from "Dick," and "Jack" breaking his neck to be the great consoler, won a place at her side. Finally, they became engaged, though the mention of "Dick's" name brought a light to the girl's eyes and a quiet, pensive period for recovery. . . . Time goes on. . . .

"Dick" is now working part time. Still cares deeply for "Ruth." When her name is mentioned he never utters a word. Changes the subject—but has never dated another girl. "Ruth's" health is so affected she's ordered away. In the meantime "Jack" takes up with a new girl, asks for and gets a release from "Ruth." But not a word about righting "Dick" with "Ruth," the only decent thing for "Jack" to do.

"Jack" sounds like those stay-home cads of war days who grabbed the girl when the better man was off on the battle fields.

Mary Fortune Is Engaged to W. J. Lawlor

Announcement Is Made at Family Dinner.

Conte Grande for that adventurous trip which they have been planning for many months. They will stop first at Cannes and then go to Marseilles, where Mrs. Brooks' plane will be awaiting them. From there they will fly to Athens, Cairo, Bagdad, and finally into India, where they'll do some big game hunting. They will not return until late spring.

Miss House to Wed John Kohler.

The marriage of Miss Julia Lilly House of Evansville, Ind., to John M. Kohler of Chicago, son of former Governor and Mrs. Walter J. Kohler of Wisconsin, will take place tomorrow in Evansville. Mrs. Fortunato Jerace, whose daughter, the former Celeste McVoy Holden was married to Walter J. Kohler Jr. last November, will go to Evansville for the ceremony.

We always feel so sorry when our attractive maidens marry men who live away from Chicago or when popular young married couples move away that it is nice to think now and then of the interesting young people who are moving to Chicago all the time. We were reminded of this when we saw the December issue of the Junior League Topics, that little brochure edited by Miss Catherine Molloy and Mrs. Ewing T. Webb for the Chicago Junior leaguers, for in it was a list of the transfers to Chicago since Sept. 1.

On the list were Mrs. William C. King [Eleanor Bowie] from Binghamton, Mrs. J. Bickford Hurlock [Betty Charls] from Cleveland, Mrs. John P. Wilson Jr. [Romayne Warren] from Detroit, Mrs. Fletcher Nyce [Katherine Thomas] from Reading, Mrs. Joseph V. Quarles Jr. [Mary Fronheiser] from Harrisburg, Mrs. J. Cameron Moag [Jane Griffiths] from Indianapolis, Mrs. Stephen Harrington [Margaret Loughran] from Asheville, and Mrs. A. Welles Wilbor [Catherine Carpenter] from Minneapolis.

Offer Jobs to Junior Leaguers.

Two Evanston members have moved to Chicago this fall, and so have transferred from the north shore to the town organization. They are Mrs. William Ross [Margaret Ballinger] and Mrs. E. T. Campbell [Gladys Witherspoon].

A paragraph of undoubted interest to many of the members requested that all members who wanted to make money leave their names at the office with the executive secretary, Miss Margaret Sinclair, for the league has many requests to supply girls for certain positions, and not all of these offers can be passed on to the right person because there has been no list of members who would like a job.

Junior league members are in great demand in positions which require a certain type of girl, so it really is getting to be of considerable financial advantage as well as a social distinction for a girl to be taken into the Junior league.

Speaking of jobs, we hear that Miss Paula Uihlein, one of the most popular of last year's debutantes, is looking for one.

Miss Imogene Bucklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vail R. Bucklin of 1415 Astor street, is not going to have her annual winter holiday this year at her family's ranch at Glendora, near Pasadena, Cal., but plans to stay at home to study singing instead. Mr. and Mrs. Bucklin will leave soon for the west.

Poors Hosts at Florida Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Poor of Lake Forest, who are at their Miami Beach estate for the winter, were hosts to a party of 20 guests at the reception held at the Bath club on New Year's day to mark the club's formal opening for the season. Mr. Poor is president of the club this year.

The marriage of Miss Charlotte Eleanore Hinds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Hinds of Syracuse, N. Y., to Francis Mariotti Truman son of Mr. and Mrs. Percival H. Truman of Evanston, will be solemnized on Saturday evening, Jan. 21, at the residence of the bride's parents.

Miss Hinds is a graduate of National Park seminary and attended Syracuse university, where she was affiliated with Gamma Phi Beta sorority. She is a member of the Junior league of Syracuse. Mr. Truman is a graduate of Williams college and a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Mrs. Thatcher Hoyt of 1406 North State street is giving a luncheon to day at the Cordon club for Mme. Elsa Aisen, who is stopping in Chicago on her way to New York from California.

The first of three lectures by Anna Louise Wangeman of Paris, formerly of Chicago, on "Old Plays and Players at the Courts of France" will be given at 11 o'clock this morning at the apartment of Mrs. William C. Jackson at 1500 Lake Shore drive.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you can no longer use, please tell me. I can place such things with needy families. Address Sally Joy Brown, The Tribune, Chicago.

Asks for Clothing, Baby Bed.

"I have been out of work for some time and we are living on charity. My wife and baby need clothes, which we have been unable to get, and I wonder if you can help us. She wants a pair of shoes and overshoes, size 6½. The baby is a boy, 16 months old. He needs everything. He is still sleeping in his first bed and it is so short he cannot stretch out to full length. Do you think you could get him a larger one? A. E."

These people are most reluctant to ask for assistance, and accepting charity is distasteful to them, but they are compelled to do it. They ask for very little, only the greatest necessities, and I hope some one will be able to supply them.

Author Returns to Hollywood as Play Fails

Gene Fowler Forgets About Swearing Off.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 5. — After swearing off Hollywood, and changing his mind, what do you thing was the first stopping place of Gene Fowler, who authored Constance Bennett's "What Price Hollywood," and "Barrymore's "State's Attorney" at the Radio studio?

Bearing in mind that Mr. Fowler not only swore off Hollywood, but also, in detail, swore off the Radio-RKO studio, what more natural than that he make his first stop at the RKO studio instead of wending his way one block further down Melrose avenue to the Paramount studio, which is the studio that has Fowler on contract for his comeback appearance as a writer.

When seen, Fowler was munching luncheon and mulling over items of chatter with a pair of RKO boys named Rickard Dix and J. Walter Rubin, in the studio lunchroom. "What brings you back?" these boys asked.

"I took the failure of my play, 'The Great Magoo' so hard that I decided I would do anything next," Fowler explained. "And in the deadened state of my sensibilities I came right to Hollywood."

Charles R. Rogers, a producer at the Paramount plant, evidently expects Dorothy Burgess to emerge satisfactorily from her San Francisco court difficulties following a recent automobile tragedy in which Miss Burgess' automobile struck another car, one of whose girl occupants was killed.

Miss Burgess today began work in a featured rôle in Rogers' "Strictly Personal," in a cast including Hugh Herbert, Lewis Calhern, Marjorie Rambeau, Dorothy Jordan, Eddie Quillan and others. Miss Burgess will have to interrupt her rôle to attend a hearing in San Francisco next week. At present she is here on bail.

The jinx of auto accidents has followed Miss Burgess for several years. In April, 1930, a court decision here decided her blameless in a crash in which another woman was hurt. In December, 1931, she was fined $75 as an alternative to a jail term after still another accident in which a Mrs. Johnson was hurt. A civil suit was filed against her after that crash.

David Durand, the 11 year old actor who was with Chevalier in "Innocents of Paris," just couldn't squeeze out a tear for a sob scene in "The Great Jasper" at RKO today, until the director, somewhat gruffly, called for some glycerin to provide little David with synthetic tears. At which the lad began to cry from humiliation.

The exchange of snippy notes and lawsuit papers between Paramount studio and Marlene Dietrich, which yesterday ended with a lovely compromise and all lawsuits dismissed, was not the first such occasion during Marlene's two year reign over the Paramount lot.

Rosalie Stewart was surprised to receive a call in her apartment rooms last Tuesday night by the apartment house clerk. "A woman I never saw is in the lobby demanding to see you and be put up in a room," the clerk said. "The woman says she is Dane." Miss Stewart investigated and found the stranger to be her old friend, Clemence Dane, the prominent English actress, who was in such a hurry to start her Hollywood career she flew here from New York and three days before expected.

Friend Remembered.

I received a set of silver as a premium one day while a girl friend was visiting me. I made the remark, "Well, I'll just put this away and when some one I don't care much for gets married, I'll give it to her as a wedding present."

Some months later this friend was married and, having forgotten all about the remark I had made, I gave her the silver. Imagine my embarrassment when I overheard her telling her mother all about what I had said. V. Mc.

Take the Initiation.

"BASHFUL."

You're Not Going with Him Now.

"Dear Miss Blake: Every time my friend and I have an appointment he finds an excuse not to show up. Should I keep on going with him.

"MAY."

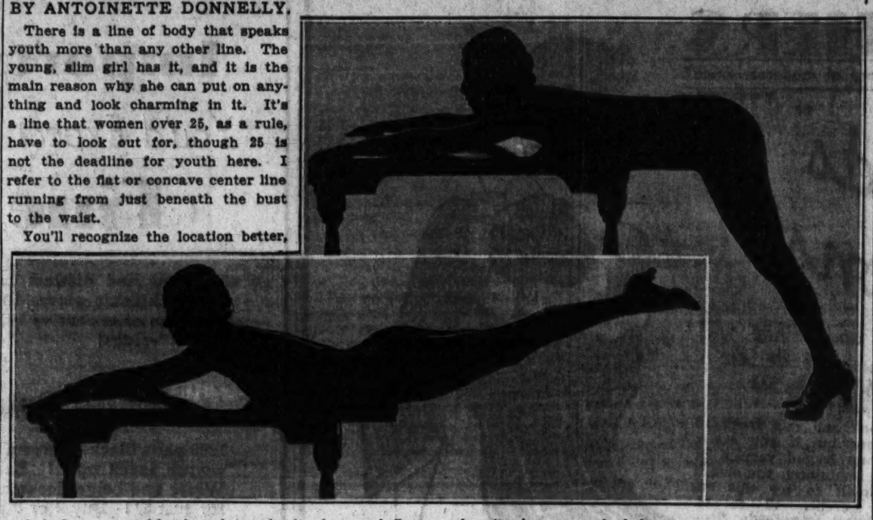
Do you need any one to tell you, May, that a man who doesn't show up for appointments is not interested.

This Exercise Banishes "Extra Tire"

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

There is a line of body that speaks youth more than any other line. The young, slim girl has it, and it is the main reason why she can put on anything and look charming in it. It's a line that women over 25, as a rule, have to look out for, though 25 is not the deadline for youth here. I refer to the flat or concave center line running from just beneath the bust to the waist.

You'll recognize the location better, perhaps, as the spot on you that is marked with a bulging diaphragm, or the thickest link in the spare tire chain around the middle. Instead of the flat or slightly concave line here many women are bloated like pouter pigeons, and the view from the side is anything but smart. With the pinched in corset waistline this lumpiness is exaggerated, side and front view.



(A) Grasp a table, bench, or bed edge and flatten the diaphragm and abdomen as you (B) raise the legs up to the table level or higher. Raise the head as you lift the legs. Lower the legs and head, and repeat. Take this exercise slowly at first.

I notice the smart shop window wax beauties are shown with this line exaggeratedly "in-curved." This isn't necessary. Flatness will do. Or fat freeness. Anyway, not a sign of a bulge is needed or wanted.

Beside its own ugly thickness this inflated section ruins the beautiful normal curve of the bustline. But get the flat diaphragm and you immediately improve the bustline. You'll usually find a protruding abdomen in company with this bloated or fat weighted diaphragm. Not always, however, for some women have it who are perfectly proportioned below the waist. Anyway, here's one exercise that will shed that fatty tissue for you. It will give the muscles on the front part of the body such tone, too, as to prevent any further useless tissue from forming.

You can do this exercise on the bed, but I find a table of average height better. It gives the leg movement more play. Anyway, get a good grip on the table sides and get ready. Then raise the legs up, down to the floor again; up, down, ten times. When you get a little more proficient raise the head up as you raise the legs. Practice first, however, with the head down. If this won't flatten the abdomen and diaphragm, nothing will. But go easily and don't strain. And keep at it!

School That Children Run Is Successful

Place Responsibility on Young Pupils.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Responsibility comes to children when they are very young in the Smyzer school, Melrose and Melvina avenues. For such is the teaching of the coöperative plan in experimental education conducted by the board of education and inaugurated at the opening of this new school last September.

Mrs. Mina S. Rogers, principal, looked back over the recent months, a few days ago, and found the experiment, thus far, successful.

"We are beginning to see that we are on the right track," Mrs. Rogers explained. "We think we have a lovely spirit here under the group coöperation project. We feel that we are working together. There is no arbitrary authority above the pupils repressing them. They can even come into my office freely and feel they are welcome. We strive to give a freedom that is well balanced."

A visit through the school revealed that the old conceptions of discipline never have been allowed to enter this school. No standing a child in the corner for whispering or gum chewing; no keeping him after school; no ruler stinging his knuckles for pulling Susan's hair. As an antidote for inferiority complexes, Willie is allowed to express himself.

An example of this coöperative method was the second grade class conducting its own lesson. There wasn't very much childish spontaniety, but the children did pretty well as parliamentarians.

An 8 year old lad conducted the class. He first asked: "Now, class, what do you want to talk about today?" The hands flew upward. He recognized a little girl.

"Mr. Chairman," she began as importantly as a congressman, "I would like to talk about Three Little Pigs."

The chairman recognized several others, calling each by name until he found that nearly every one wanted to talk about the Three Little Pigs. The first little girl was given the floor. When she had finished the story the chairman asked if there were any corrections.

"Betty talked nice," from one.

"She talked too fast," from another, and from a third: "She was supposed to tell about Whitey." The chairman thought that a good correction.

Mrs. Rogers hastened to add that the three "R's" are still as important as they ever were and are not being neglected. She said the school is going right ahead with the old subjects, but is helping to teach a little faster by the coöperative method.

The Smyzer school with an enrollment of 850 pupils is the third such experimental school to start within the last two years. The others are the Kilmer and the Lewis-Champlin schools. Smyzer was built to take the overflow from the Prussing school.

Lelong Designs Practical Frock for a Princess

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—European princesses are abandoning their tradition of dowdiness. Instead of exerting the royal privilege of commanding the couturier, they are listening to his advice, and thus raising the standard of chic among royalty. A number of women bearing the title of princess are among the forty smartest women of Paris today. What they wear is to be reckoned with as a style of influence.

The dress is shown in the accompanying sketch. It is made of a heavy dark blue crêpe silk, somewhat rougher than crêpe de chine. The skirt is a straight skirt with a front gore that flares from a point halfway down, making the hem comfortably wide. The bodice is perfectly plain with long fitted sleeves, and in front Lelong has put a yoke that descends into an arrowhead shape to held the sash at the waistline. This sash is of crêpe silk with a dark blue velvet ribbon band in the center.

There is a novel version of the sailor collar at the V shaped neckline. This collar is square at the back, as shown, and in front the points, instead of outlining the V are pulled outward and sewed into the armholes of the sleeves. A loop of velvet ribbon edges the V of the neck. The sleeves are trimmed with velvet ribbon also.

Patience Is Vital Element in Child Care

Irritability Works Havoc with Youngsters.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

"Everything goes along very well," runs an interesting letter, "until I get overtired or nervous. Then my troubles with the children begin. But just let me get rested or take my nervousness in hand and things clear up as if by magic."

Another says in part, "Impatience used to be my besetting sin, but since I have had my two lovely children I have had to try to conquer it. When it still occasionally gets the better of me it works havoc—unhappiness and disobedience and tears may result. If I believe myself, as I express it, I have no trouble in managing the children."

Haven't you proved that to yourself again and again? Noises that are perfectly legitimate noises for children to make don't bother you if you're well and rested—sometimes you don't even hear them. But when you're overtired it's a different matter. Duties performed at a child's pace, if you're nervously hurried, seem to be done deliberately at a snail's pace, and make you cross and scolding. Ordinary heedlessness changes color and becomes selfishness or disobedience once you get keyed up or flustered with too much housework or sewing.

It isn't the children, it's ourselves mostly. If we can keep our balance and our perspective on the children we can sail along pretty smoothly. And here's one more mother who bears testimony to the fact in this letter:

"My three children are a boy 7, a girl almost 4 and a little sister a year and a half old, and how my husband and I do enjoy our children!

"One of your recent articles regarding patience was very good. One part especially suited me and this is it—'Patience hurryeth not.' That one thought comes to me when I seem to reach the end of my patience and I then relax a little and slow down a bit, and things go much better."

The part this mother mentions was in the "Patience" booklet, which incidentally, I must tell you, is not merely a lot of directions telling you not to be cross or impatient. It is more constructively helpful than that. It will be sent to you on receipt of a stamped self-addressed envelope.

New Radio City Music Hall to Be Film House

Feature Movies and Stage Shows on Programs.

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The new seven million dollar Radio City Music hall in Rockefeller center will drop vaudeville and offer continuous performances of feature pictures and stage shows at popular prices beginning next Wednesday, following only two weeks of the inaugural bill with which S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) opened the 6,200 seat theater on Dec. 27.

Announcement that the music hall would be converted into a motion picture theater de luxe was made by M. H. Aylesworth, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation. He explained that the change would involve the presentation of stage productions at popular prices at the RKO-Roxy movie theater across the street. Roxy will continue to direct both houses.

While negotiations with theatrical producers are under way for the stage productions intended for the RKO-Roxy theater that house will continue its engagement of the motion picture version of "The Animal Kingdom."

The decision to use the Radio City Music hall for feature pictures and stage shows has been occasioned partly by the unusual success of the RKO-Roxy theater. With a seating capacity of 3,700 the RKO-Roxy theater has been unable to accommodate the thousands who sought admission.

According to Mr. Aylesworth, it is the desire of RKO interests in scaling down their prices on both houses to place admission within reach of all; otherwise, company officials feel, the city's newest amusement center would fall short of its highest purpose—amusement for all.

"We discovered after the opening of Radio City Music hall that entire families who had come with great anticipation were being turned away," said Mr. Aylesworth. "Such families may be seen in the lobby at almost any time. They study the scale of prices, then go into a family conference, decide that the family purse is insufficient, shake their heads, and go away.

"Though the Radio City Music hall played to more than $112,000 in its first week of operation," reads Mr. Aylesworth's formal announcement of the change of bills at the two new theaters in Radio City, "it is the feeling of the executives of RKO that the theater's future would be more definitely assured if its prices could be reduced to the popular range. This reduction of prices and change of policy will enable the theater to accommodate its audiences with four de luxe shows daily and five on Saturday, Sunday, and holidays."

ASSERT SCIENCE IS ABLE TO SEE VIRUS OF DEATH

Its Shape Is Revealed by New Use of Light.

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—The hitherto invisible "filterable virus," man's mortal disease enemy, is caused to reveal its shape by a new use of light at the University of California, which will be announced in Science tomorrow.

This exploit, in the fight against disease, is comparable to that of the cave man who learned to size up oncoming peril by watching on his cave wall the shadow of an approaching beast of prey. Instead of shadows, the scientists see "refraction," a bending of light which depends partly on shape of the bodies of the lurking virus.

Filterable viruses include the cause of the common cold, infantile paralysis, and many other diseases, all of them difficult to stop because the virus producing them never has been seen. Viruses also ravage the farmer's domestic animals and under the name of mosaics are a source of vast crop losses.

Two of Them "Seen."

Two of them have been "seen" so far by the California method, one the virue of tobacco mosaic, the other of tomato mosaic. Both are rod shaped. This is a familiar bacterial form among the visible germs of the disease world.

The rod shapes have to be deduced from expert knowledge of the meaning of changing forms of light which shine through a liquid stream, in slow motion, in which the virus bodies are immersed. The discovery of the meanings of these changes in light is credited to other scientists by the authors of this work, William N. Takahashi and T. E. Rawlins, but they are the first to publish the application of this new knowledge to filterable virus.

The virus stream is made to flow under the eyepiece of a microscope. A beam of polarized light shines through this stream, and the beam strikes the virus stream at right angles to its direction of flow.

Changes Its Shape.

The result is that when there are no virus in the stream the "field" under the eyepiece remains dark. When the virus are rod shaped, like logs floating end-on downstream, a bright band of light crosss the field of vision, like a white belt on a black dress. If the invisible objects in the stream are round or leaf shaped the band of light changes its shape very distinctly into two narrow, parallel lines.

These light effects are due to double refraction—that is, a doubling of the ordinary bending of light which occurs when light passes from air into another transparent medium, such as the liquid stream. The double refraction comes from polarizing the light. This means that all the rays are caused to vibrate in the same plane, or direction, by passing them through a special kind of prism.

The flowing streams were made of juices of tobacco and tomato plants, both those afflicted with virus and others known to be healthy. In no case did healthy juice show the tell tale refraction band and never did the virus afflicted plants fail to disclose it.

Acts Uniformly.

This indicates, says the report, "that the virus of tobacco mosaic, or some substance regularly associated with it, is composed of rod shaped particles."

Science has been on the verge of "seeing" viruses for about two years. One method has been to put "overcoats" on them—that is, let them coat themselves with some sticky substance until like snowballs they roll up big enough to see the resulting mass. Another has been to use the ultra-short wave lengths of invisible light, which register on photographic plates. But not all the ultra-short light rays are reflected. The California method uses ordinary light with its vibration direction restricted.

ACT TO SETTLE MARSHALL FIELD 5 MILLION TRUST

Friendly Suits Name 67 Defendants.

Final settlement of $5,000,000 in trust funds which Marshall Field, Chicago merchant prince, settled on his daughter, Ethel, the late Lady Beatty, was asked in bills filed yesterday in the Superior court. The effect of the actions, which are of a friendly nature and brought by the trust companies handling the funds, will be to settle $1,000,000 each upon Lady Beatty's husband, Admiral Earl Beatty, and her three sons. Lady Beatty died on July 17, 1932.

Under the terms of her father's will the residue, after payments to the husband and sons, amounting to about $1,000,000, will be added to a $5,000,000 trust fund created for the descendants of Marshall Field Jr., brother of Lady Beatty. They, as well as descendants of the brothers and sisters of the first Marshall Field, numbering 67 in all, are named as co-defendants in the suits.

Lady Beatty's three sons are Arthur Ronald Lambert Field Tree, born of her first marriage; David Field Beatty, who as Viscount Borodale is heir to his father's earldom, and Peter Randolph Louis Beatty. The suits were filed by Cutting, Moore & Sidley, representing the United States Trust company of New York, trustee under a $3,000,000 trust fund for Lay Beatty, and Wilson and McIlvaine, representing the Northern Trust company, trustee under a similar $2,000,000 trust fund.

The first Marshall Field died in 1906, having been preceded in death by his son. The primary beneficiaries under the trust fund for descendants of Marshall Field Jr., were his three children and their children. One of the children, Henry Field, died in 1917. The other two are Marshall Field III., who has three children, Marshall Field IV., Barbara, and Bettine Field; and Mrs. Gwendolyn Field Edmonstone, who has two children, Mary Bettine and Jean Edmonstone.

The Marshall Field Jr. trust fund will not be terminated until all of the children of Marshall Field III. and Mrs. Edmonstone reach the age of 21.

The cases were assigned to Judge Denis E. Sullivan for hearing.

LAW AND ORDER RULE UNIVERSE, SAYS DR. FROST

Dr. Edwin B. Frost, director emeritus of Yerkes observatory and a teacher and authority on astronomy for 46 years, yesterday took issue with assertions of other scientific leaders that the universe is governed by chance rather than by definite natural laws.

Dr. Frost's remarks were made in a lecture before the Women's Athletic club. "No matter how learned a mathematician may be, if his tools are not applied right the conclusions are bound to be wrong," Dr. Frost asserted.

"We look at the universe in this way and find that the things we see are made of the same substance as ourselves, that motions once thought to be chance follow definite laws," he continued.

"We may think of ourselves as members of this small planet, but we belong to the universe. Therefore all our human actions should be on a broader plane, and we should act as sons and daughters of the universe."

The eye of the camera has replaced the human eye in astronomy, according to Prof. H. D. Curtis of the University of Michigan, who gave a lecture last night before the Chicago Astronomical society in Adler planetarium, illustrated by lantern slides and motion pictures taken on eclipse expeditions last August.

It is hoped, Prof. Curtis said, that the next total eclipse in 1934, which will be observed from a small island in the vicinity of Borneo, will afford a better chance to solve the mystery of the sun's corona. New instruments are being perfected which may give clews to the substance of the corona's flames.

Painters' Union Official Gives Up; Explains Shot

William Schaaf, 2141 Cuyler avenue, official of a painters' union local, surrendered to police last night on a warrant obtained by three members of another local as the result of a shooting at 220 West Oak street Tuesday night. Schaaf told police his accusers attacked him and that a single shot was fired when one of them dropped a pistol. He added that the three men were thrown out of the meeting for trying to distribute communistic literature.

BLACKHAWKS, BOSTON FIGHT TO SCORELESS TIE

C. Y. O. CHAMPIONS MEET COAST FIGHTERS TONIGHT

15,000 TO SEE BOUTS FOR U. S. TITLE TROPHY

BY FRENCH LANE.

California's finest fighting youths—16 of them from Los Angeles and San Francisco—will invade the Chicago Stadium tonight and attempt to pour a broadside into the advancing line of the Catholic Youth Organization's champions of Chicago.

Firing is to start at 7:45 o'clock and at along about 11 o'clock the list of casualties will be complete. Folks will know then whether the more skillful and hardest punching fighting men come from out of the golden west or from Chicago's great melting pot.

Crowd to Exceed 15,000.

The 16 championship battles—along with eight preliminaries—will be waged before a crowd of more than 15,000. From the way the ticket sale was progressing last night it is possible the world's largest indoor arena will be packed. More than likely it will be a highly Chicago partisan gathering, for very few rooters have followed the Californians here. Yet the boys from the west do not expect this to act as a handicap.

Their work done as far as the long training grind is concerned, the members of both teams took things easy yesterday at their respective camps. They came through the long period of intensive drilling in good shape, so 32 splendidly conditioned young men will engage in the intersectional biff carnival.

For National Catholic Title.

The national Catholic boxing championship will be at stake when the amateurs square away and begin tossing punches. The Cardinal Mundelein trophy, emblematic of the national championship, will go to the team scoring the greatest number of points during the evening. The Bishop B. J. Sheil cup will be fought for by the Los Angeles and Chicago boys, while the San Francisco and Chicago boxers will scrap it out for the Frederick H. Massman cup. Each intercity winner will receive a gold belt.

A most colorful crowd will gather around the Stadium ringside to see the amateurs scrap it out. Bishop Sheil, sponsor of the Catholic Youth Organization, will be host to a group of church dignitaries and laymen. Governor Elect Horner, Lieutenant Governor Elect Donovan, Mayor Cermak, and many other political, business, industrial and professional leaders in the affairs of Chicago will be in the crowd.

Opens with Anthem.

The program will open with John Pane-Gasser, the operatic tenor, singing the Star Spangled Banner to the accompaniment of the big Stadium organ. A bugler will sound attention, which will summon the 32 boxers to the ring, where they will salute the national colors which are to be unfurled by a group of Catholic sea scouts.

The boxers from the two widely separated parts of America have been trained by two of the most famous boxers of their day. Willie Ritchie, a citizen of San Francisco and a former world's lightweight champion, has taught his tricks and punches to the California boys. Packey McFarland of Joliet and Chicago has endeavored to pass on some of the skill that made him famous, to the boys who will be fighting for Chicago.

Rothier Fights Petralia.

The two bouts which promise to attract the most attention bring together the welterweights, Henry Rothier of Chicago and Nick Petralia of San Francisco, and the light heavyweights, Max Marek of Chicago and Leo Greenhalgh of Los Angeles.

Rothier and Marek were developed in THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves tournaments. Rothier was a Chicago and an international champion on the Golden Gloves team of last year. Marek was a runner-up on the Chicago team and an intercity champion.

Sportsmanship will be the keynote of the intercity mêlée. This was indicated when McFarland, the coach of the Chicago team, was agreed upon as referee of all bouts.

Eight bouts in which the C. Y. O. junior championships for the Chicago archdiocese will be determined will precede the 16 intercity encounters.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Blackhawks and the Boston Bruins last night fought to a scoreless tie in the Bruins' second Chicago appearance of the season and the third Bruin-Chicago clash of the year. The Hawks thus collected a point in the league standings, something that their earlier Boston meetings had not provided, the Bruins having won 5 to 1 and 1 to 0 in the earlier encounters.

The game, though it involved hard play, was in marked contrast, not only with Bruin games of past years, but also with the other two games of the Hawks' current home stand. In the Maple Leaf game on Dec. 27 seven goals were scored by the two teams and there were five scored in the affair with the Canadiens New Year's night. The contrast was not especially pleasing to the 9,200 fans in attendance.

Now It's "Judge of Play."

The game was played under the rule alterations thought up several days ago. Instead of two referees the contest was played with one referee and a "judge of play." Judging from last night's affair the duty of the judge of play is to stand on the blue line and play piccolo solos. This tooting innovation, signifying offside play, tends to displease the folks who pay to get in, though the judge of play notion may be an ingenious idea from the point of view of the Canadians, who like to tinker ever so often.

The officials were showered with fruit to the point where the Stadium white wings had to rush out with their scoops to clear the ice. Part of the shower, however, was due to a fine drawn penalty on Capt. Graham for handling Eddie Shore too roughly in the final period.

For the second time this year Shore, erstwhile bad man, played without penalty. Though he's no longer a bad man, apparently, he certainly is an iron man still. For the second time this year he played the full time—70 minutes in this instance, something that no hockey player other than goalies ever attempt.

The Blackhawks developed only a single serious threat in the first period, a wicked shot by McFadyen after 12 minutes of play, this despite the fact that C. Thompson was called upon to make 10 stops during the session. On the other hand the visitors harassed Goalie Gardiner no end, especially during the time Abel was off for holdings.

Stewart Sent Off Ice.

Shortly after the half way point in the period, the aforementioned Boston crew staged a lively crossfire, which had Gardiner hopping from right to left with great dexterity, but the danger was dissipated when Stewart was bounced for wielding a high stick in an apparent effort to decapitate Abel.

Unlike the first period, the major aggressiveness in the second session was supplied by the Hawks, especially during the first 15 minutes. In the last five minutes the Bruins got pretty tough, the narrowest escape for the Hawks coming when Beattie got inside the defense only to become inaccurate in his attempt to beat Gardiner at the brink of the cage.

The third period saw neither team content with a tie, each side repeatedly taking chances with offensive rallies instead of sitting back on a defensive policy, as sometimes happens in the third period when the lads are content with a draw.

With two minutes to play Shore, Clapper, Stewart and Barry had the rubber bouncing around the cage with Gardiner completely off his beat, but the frenzied performers missed the biggest chance of the night.

Couture Scares Boston.

In the overtime both sides opened up pretty well in the first six minutes, but the going didn't get real tough till Graham got put off for charging Shore as the period went into the seventh minute. The Bruins' eagerness to take advantage of the Hawks being shorthanded nearly proved disastrous to the visitors, for Couture stole the puck and got right up to Goalie Thompson's boots. Tiny, however, made an instep save and that was that. In the last minute both sides eased off, content to take a point apiece in the league standings.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

GLEASON AND "BLACK SOX."

DEATH of William [Kid] Gleason at Philadelphia brings to mind the decision this rough and ready, likeable, sterling fellow had to make as White Sox manager in the eighth and as it proved final game of the 1919 world series of scandalous memory. It was what pitcher to start against the Cincinnati Reds, who had a game advantage of 4 to 3. The series that year required five winning games for the world flag.

Let's refresh our memories a bit. Chicago's White Sox, American league champions, eight of whom later were classed as "Black Sox", were one of the greatest baseball outfits ever gathered together. They had three great pitchers in Eddie Cicotte, Lefty Williams, and Dick Kerr. Of these, Williams had best won and lost record for the season, Kerr second, and Cicotte third. In effectiveness, based on earned runs by opponents, Cicotte was first, Williams second, and Kerr third.

It was natural, therefore, that Cicotte and Williams should pitch the first two games at Cincinnati, both won by the Reds with weird fielding shown by the Sox. Then Kerr held the Reds to 3 hits and Chicago won a game. Again Cicotte and Williams pitched and Cincinnati won two more. Kerr added a second victory. Cicotte pitched a victory.

That was the situation when the teams returned to Chicago for the eighth contest. Rumors of crookedness already were rife, although the actual proof was not unearthed until nearly a year later. Gleason was troubled and distraught, unable to sleep nights. He was loath to believe his players, to most of whom he had been a pal, would "cross" him personally, whatever they might do to any one else. But he knew something was wrong. So did Catcher Ray Schalk, who was not getting the kind of balls from his pitchers for which he signaled.

To a small coterie of those in whom he had confidence, Gleason discussed his perplexity before the eighth game in the clubhouse at Comiskey park. It was too long ago to quote his exact words, but here is the substance of it:

"Something's wrong with this ball club. I have my suspicions but no positive proof. Kerr is the only pitcher of the leaders of whom I am sure. He pitched a hard game day before yesterday and he's a little fellow and it's too soon for him to come back. Again, if we should win this game and make it 4-4 on the series, I'd want Kerr, whom I trust, for the final. I'll have to gamble.

"We've had a players' meeting. I told them the talk going round. They know they're under suspicion. One half of the team is not speaking to the other half. Under those circumstances, it doesn't look as if any one would dare not do his best. If I pitch Kerr, he's not right, because it's too soon, and I need him if there is a ninth game. Cicotte pitched yesterday, so he is out. It must be Williams, I guess, with the hope he and others under suspicion really are trying. I'm crushed and heartbroken over what I fear is happening."

Cincinnati won the eighth and final game, its fifth of the series, 10 to 5. Williams started. Cincinnati made 4 hits and 4 runs while one opponent was being put out. Williams then retired in favor of James, who later was succeeded by Wilkinson. The world series was over, but not its repercussions.

TINY THORNHILL IS INDORSED AS STANFORD COACH

Board Picks Assistant to Succeed Warner.

Stanford University, Cal., Jan. 5.—(AP)—C. E. (Tiny) Thornhill, who has aided Glenn S. (Pop) Warner in coaching Stanford football teams for several years, was recommended as successor to his former chief by the board of athletic control here tonight.

Thornhill learned his football at the University of Pittsburgh under Warner. He enrolled in 1913 and was graduated in 1917. He was named all-American tackle on the 1916 team, which has been called the greatest in Pittsburgh's history. Jock Sutherland, present Pittsburgh coach, played guard on the same eleven.

Played and Coached as Pro.

Thornhill was graduated as a mining engineer, but the ink was hardly dry on his diploma before he was playing professional football at Massillon, O., birthplace of the pro game. He later coached pro football at Cleveland.

After two years' army service in the world war he began his college coaching career at Centre college, where he was assistant in 1920 and 1921.

When Warner accepted the coaching position at Stanford in 1922 he sent Thornhill and Andy Kerr, now at Colgate, out to the coast to lay the groundwork for him. Warner followed in 1924 after expiration of his Pittsburgh contract. In addition to his football activities Thornhill played basketball both in college and as a professional.

Born in Virginia.

Thornhill is 39 years old and of Scotch-Irish descent. He was born April 14, 1893, in Warrenton, Va., and was reared in Beaver, Pa. As a college student he weighed 217 pounds, which accounts for the negative nickname "Tiny." Tornhill married Evelyn Koenig, a Pennsylvania girl, in 1923. They have two children.

The recommendation is subject to the formal approval of the president and board of trustees, but members of the athletic board pointed out that this procedure is usually considered a matter of formality.

The board of athletic control also recommended Ernie Nevers, former Stanford full back star and assistant t. Warner during the 1932 season, for the post of assistant coach to Thornhill.

LET'S GET ACQUAINTED WITH AL

Dempsey Puts Off Naming Site of Fight

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—George Getz, chairman of the sports committee of A Century of Progress, today conferred with Jack Dempsey and Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, in regard to bringing the Schmeling-Baer bout to Soldiers' field in Chicago as a World's Fair attraction.

Mr. Getz said after the conference that he was convinced the match would be held either in Chicago or New York. Dempsey is not seriously considering offers from ten other cities, according to the Chicago sportsman.

"There will be no decision on a site for the bout for two or three weeks," Getz said. "Dempsey has two weeks of vaudeville engagements to fill and after that he and Jacobs are coming to Chicago to look over the situation.

"Jack is not being deluded by estimates of an enormous gate. He realizes money is tight and that there are only two spots where a big show could possibly show a profit—Chicago and New York."

It will be necessary to legalize 15 round nonchampionship bouts in Illinois before Chicago can be chosen. The law permits fights of that length only where a heavyweight title is involved. Getz promised Dempsey this could be arranged.

Butler Finds No Recruiting in Coast Loop

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 5.—(AP)—After a 15 month survey of athletic conditions in the Pacific Coast conference Jonathan A. Butler gave its members a "clean bill of health" today so far as existing rules and regulations are concerned.

Butler, former assistant to Maj. John Griffith, Big Ten conference commissioner, was retained Sept. 1, 1931, to make the investigation. His report delves into every phase of athletes' student life.

Clears All Athletes.

He checked on the entrance of virtually every athlete in the conference. His findings in the case of the University of California constitute a summation applicable to the other nine members of the conference, as follows:

"An examination of the entrance credentials of all athletes in the University of California showed each had met the standard entrance requirements applicable at the time of their admission."

In the case of Stanford, Butler concluded, "athletes are not favored in any way in gaining admission to Stanford university or in remaining as students of the institution."

No Recruiting, He Finds.

Regarding the recruiting and financial aids practiced at the member institutions Butler said no violations in the matter of giving athletes preference in scholarships or campus employment were found as concerned the colleges themselves. He added, however:

"There can be no question athletic enthusiasts (alumni and others) have financially assisted individual conference athletes in various ways. The activity of an individual alumnus in aiding one or more athletes is a type of thing upon which it is difficult to get specific proof."

He said the proportion of alumni and athletes involved is small.

Taking cognizance of the fact "a great majority of the athletes are young men who must earn or otherwise secure all or a major portion of the funds to meet their college expenses," Butler recommended "that the conference consider the desirability of stating the definite ways and channels, if any, through which financial aid may legitimately be extended to athletes from alumni and other outside sources."

Stagg Continues to Improve; Sits Up Most of Day

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Amos Alonzo Stagg, recovering from a severe case of bronchial pneumonia and influenza, today was well enough to sit up in bed most of the day and talk to the visitors.

The former Chicago university football coach, retired because of his age, 71, and against his wishes, was taken to the hospital last week in a serious condition.

Dr. Max Rohde, Stagg's former football pupil at Chicago, said that offers of coaching jobs had continued to pour in on the "Old Man," even during his illness. Stagg, however, is understood to take the position that he will accept no offer that means the demotion or firing of some other coach.

If Stagg continues to improve, Dr. Rohde said, he probably will leave the hospital some time early next week.

The matches will be the first important events on Chicago's imposing golf program for 1933.

SCHAAF FIGHTS POREDA TONIGHT AT N. Y. GARDEN

New York, Jan. 5.—[Special.]—Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, will meet Stanley Poreda, New Jersey, at Madison Suare Garden tomorrow night in a ten round bout which Garden officials hope will help determine a challenger for Jack Sharkey, world's heavyweight champion.

Schaaf and Poreda met last summer in New Jersey and Poreda won the decision. Schaaf, in his most recent bout, knocked out Unknown Winston in Boston.

Michigan, Cornell Call Off Track Meet Until 1935

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 5.—[Special.]—The Michigan-Cornell annual track meet, one of the oldest dual contests in the United States, will be postponed for two years because of financial difficulties, it was announced today. The next meeting between the traditional rivals will be held in 1935. The first meet was held in 1902.

PAUL, MILLING ARRIVE TODAY TO BEGIN TRAINING

Both Battle on Stadium Program Friday.

Tommy Paul of Buffalo, National Boxing association featherweight champion, and Varias Milling of the Philippines will reach the loop today for their respective engagements a week from tonight at the Chicago Stadium. The champion will defend his 126 pound title in a 10 round bout with Freddie Miller of Cincinnati, while Milling, the little brown man tackles Johnny Pena of New York in one of the supporting bouts.

This will mark Paul's first defense of his crown since he won over a field of contenders last year in the N. B. A. tournament. Tommy's final bout in that competition was against Pena, who won the right to battle in the final number by eliminating Fidel La Barba. Last week Paul convinced Chicago fans that he was a real champion by winning over La Barba at the Stadium.

Leading Feathers on Card.

With Milling on this same program along with Pena and Paul, fans will see a trio of 126 pounders who hold down the top spots in their division in N. B. A. territory.

Filipinos have seldom failed to please Chicago customers. Such crowd pleasers as Pancho Villa, Pete Sarmiento, Young Nationalista, Clever Sencio, Santiago Zorilla, and Armando Santiago have appeared here and Milling's record thus far indicates that he rates with the best of his fellow countrymen.

Milling holds the California state featherweight championship. One of his recent bouts was a draw with Baby Arizmendi, who is ranked by California commission as the leading featherweight. Other high spots in Milling's record are a draw with Kid Francis and a victory over Claude Varner, after Varner had beaten La Barba.

Dazzo Meets Mitchell.

Chicagoans who claim that Paul Dazzo is rapidly headed for the upper flight of featherweights, will get a chance to compare his style and ability with the leaders on this program. Paul is paired with Johnny Mitchell of Detroit, the same Mitchell who last summer at Sparta stadium dropped Dazzo in the first round, only to see Paul recover and punch out a point victory.

By way of contrast to the little fellows, the program will offer Martin Levandowski of Grand Rapids against Harry Ebbetts of New York in the 10 round semi-windup.

JOHNSON NAMED GREENSKEEPER EXECUTIVE AGAIN

Ralph N. Johnson of the Medinah Country club was reëlected president of the Midwest Greenskeepers' association at the annual meeting held last night in the Sherman hotel. Peter Stewart of Lake Shore was elected first vice president; Ed Dearie of Ridgemoor, second vice president; C. A. Tregillus of A. D. Lasker's estate, secretary, and Fred Kruger of Olympia Fields, treasurer.

Directors elected include John MacGregor of Chicago Golf, D. W. Danley of Glen Oak, A. L. Brandon of St Charles, J. B. Boyd of Sunset Ridge and M. L. Bezek, unattached. Plans were made to conduct a greenskeepers' school early in March at the University of Chicago and also for the annual convention of the National Greenskeepers' association which will be held at the Sherman hotel Jan. 31 to Feb. 3. MacGregor is president of the national association.

Ad Men Decide Ping-Pong Championships Tonight

The final round in the Advertising Men's ping pong championship tournament will be held tonight at the North Wabash Table Tennis club, Wabash avenue and Lake street. Eight players, including James Olson and Percy Bogner, survived the preliminary rounds last night.

Herrera Starts Drill for Bout with Wes Ramey

Tony Herrera, El Paso, Tex., lightweight, who is making his home in Chicago, and Wesley Ramey of Grand Rapids, Mich., will meet in a 10 round bout at Grand Rapids next Thursday. Herrera has started training at Kid Howard's gymnasium. Tony is seeking a match with Barney Ross. Ross is listed fourth in the National Boxing association's lightweight ratings and Herrera is seventh. The N. B. A. recently listed Herrera as No. 1 lightweight in Illinois.

Three six round matches have been closed for the second show at the Cicero stadium on Jan. 20. Johnny Phagan, 1932 international Golden Gloves welterweight titleholder, has signed to face Harry Schuman of the west side. Another match will bring together Ray Trambile, Rockford, Ill., middleweight, and Eddie Gill of St. Charles. Kid Irish, St. Louis featherweight, and Charlie Cerminaro also are on the card.

The bout between Gorilla Jones, former middleweight champion, and Young Stuhley of Kewanee, Ill., at Clinton, Ia., has been set ahead from Jan. 16 to Jan. 13. . . . Tracy Cox faces Jackie Purvis and Young Joe Wolcott meets Frankie Hughes at Indianapolis Tuesday. . . . Paul Pantaleo and Barney Abel leave for Terre Haute, Ind., tonight, where Pantaleo fights Patsy Perroni Monday. . . . Baxter Calmes meets Tom Patrick at Hollywood, Cal., tonight. . . . Jackie Sharkey, Minneapolis, Minn., featherweight, returns Sunday. . . . Little Pal, Indiana Harbor 124 pound boxer, has resumed training after being out of the ring since last September when he whipped Jackie Stewart.

The interscholastic amateur boxing meet between St. Philip High school boxers and St. Patrick of South Chicago at St. Philip's gymnasium scheduled for tonight has been postponed until Monday.

MOON MULLINS—LEADING A DOG'S LIFE

North Sider First to Seek Silver Skates

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Harvey Wirta, 3117 Abbott court, holds the distinction of being the first to enter THE TRIBUNE'S sixteenth annual Silver Skates derbies which will be held Jan. 21 and 22 at Garfield park. Harvey, a north side boy, will compete in the boys' intermediate derby for those who are 16 and 17 years of age.

The entry blank was printed for the first time in the early editions of Wednesday's TRIBUNE. Harvey didn't waste any time clipping the blank from the paper, for his letter was postmarked at midnight, less than five hours after the first paper had reached the streets.

Deadline Is Jan. 16.

No entry will be accepted later than midnight Jan. 16. By that time, however, it is anticipated that more than 4,000 boys and girls from Chicago and urrounding territory will have entered the seven races.

The first Silver Skates derby was held in 1917. Expanding year by year to furnish competition for all ages, there now are five races for boys. In 1919 the boys' junior class was established and when, in 1923, another age group was devised, the junior division then was changed to include those 14 and 15 years of age, while the new class, the boys' intermediate, took in those 16 and 17 years of age. The boys' juvenile class, for those 12 and 13 years old, was established in 1925, while in 1931 the boys' midget division, for those under 12 years of age, completed the program.

Look at List of Winners.

The first Silver Skates derby for girls was held in 1921. A year later the girls' junior division was started for those under 16 years of age.

Previous winners of the Mens' Silver Skates derby, the parent race, include the names of practically all of Chicago's best skaters. Many of them have won national and international honors. The list of previous winners follows:

MEN'S SENIOR SILVER SKATES WINNERS.

1917—Art Staff.	1925—Oneil Farrell.
1919—Charley Fisher.	1927—Ross Robinson.
1920—Roy McWhirter.	1928—Chas. Delphier.
1921—Wm. Steinmetz.	1929—Eddie Murphy.
1922—Jack Stowell.	1930—Wm. Minster.
1923—Harry Kaskey.	1931—Eddie Schroeder.
1924—Francis Allen.

Ross Robinson, the 1927 champion, came from Toronto while the following year, Charles Delphier of Detroit was the winner. All others are Chicago skaters. No Derby was held in 1932 because of the lack of ice at Garfield park.

The senior Derby is decided at two miles with qualifying races of one mile. All champions are barred from future competition, although in the other Derbies the winners may compete again by moving up to the next age class. Thus several have won two or more championships.

Loyola Seeks No. 5 Tonight at Detroit

Michigan at Iowa.
Purdue at Minnesota.
Chicago at Wisconsin.
Northwestern at Illinois.
Indiana at Ohio State.
Marquette at Notre Dame.
St. Thomas at De Paul.

Loyola univeristy's basketball team opens a three game road trip at Detroit tonight when it meets the College of the City of Detroit. The Ramblers will be seeking their fifth consecutive victory.

Detroit will start four of the veterans who lost two games to Loyola last year, 36 to 30 and 33 to 19. Their only defeat this year was by Olivet college.

Loyola goes to Toledo tomorrow night to play St. John's university and rests Sunday preparatory to meeting the strong Michigan Normal college team Monday night at Ypsilanti.

Normal has four of its regulars back. Last year it handed Loyola a 25 to 17 defeat. Benny Bayer, who scored 13 points in that game, will team with Capt. Walter Kazlusky, who accounted for 6 points last year, at the forward positions.

The Loyola swimming team will engage in two dual meets next week. The Ramblers go to Crane Junior college on Tuesday and meet Northwestern's "B" team at the Loyola pool on Friday.

AMELIA SIVORE, S. SIDE REALTY DEVELOPER, DIES

Mrs. Amelia Sivore, widow of Antonio Sivore, pioneer real estate operator on the south side, died yesterday at her home, 7921 South Prairie avenue. She was 71 years old.

Mrs. Sivore came to this country as a child from Genoa, Italy. After her marriage she and her husband settled on the south side and, engaging in the real estate business together, developed many important business corners, including the main entrance to the stockyards, at Root and Halsted streets. During the World's Fair of 1893 they operated a hotel at 43d and State streets.

Mrs. Sivore is survived by four sons, Frank, George, Harold, and Victor. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at St. Dorothy's church, 78th street and Vernon avenue, with burial in Calvary cemetery.

MRS. VOSBURGH, WHO SAW GREAT FIRE START, DIES

Stories of Mrs. O'Leary's Cow Recalled.

Mrs. Frank Ellis Vosburgh, 73 years old, of 6519 Bosworth avenue, who as a child lived a block from the home of Mrs. O'Leary and her cow when the great Chicago fire of 1871 began, died early yesterday after a six weeks' illness in her home.

MRS. VOSBURGH.

"I think mother, whose maiden name was Nora Griffin, blamed her older brother, John, almost more than the cow for the fire," Arthur Vosburgh, a son, said. "John was about 16 at the time and she was 12 and considered him a great tease. John and other kids in the neighborhood liked the taste of the warm milk fresh from Mrs. O'Leary's usually patient cow. And, as mother told it, they had clustered around the cow as Mrs. O'Leary milked her that night of Oct. 9, pestering her for milk out of her tin pail.

"Just as she turned to chase the boys out of the barn the lamp was overturned. Whether the boys did it accidentally in running, or the cow lost her temper and kicked it over no one probably knew."

Father Joseph M. Vosburgh, another son, here took up the story.

Guests Stay for Weeks.

"The house where my grandfather, John Griffin, lived, was at 836 Forquer street, one block north of the O'Leary home, which was in the 800 block on De Koven street," he said. "The evening of the fire my mother was having a party. Her father was opening the door for them to go home when he saw the flames, at 9 o'clock. He kept all the children there and got in touch with their parents. Some stayed all night and other guests, homeless refugees, were there for weeks."

Funeral Services Monday.

Surviving are Mrs. Vosburgh's daughter, Mrs. R. A. Delaney, with whom she resided; her two sons, a sister, Mrs. Margaret Moore, 70 years old, of 9206 South Racine avenue; a brother, George, of Chicago; and three grandchildren, Mary and Eileen Delaney and Marjorie Vosburgh.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Monday in Our Lady of Sorrows church.

Report Shows Gold Stocks Increase $19,000,000.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 5.—A reduction of only $18,000,000 in the volume of money in circulation, indicating an abnormally small return flow of currency after the holidays, is reported in this week's federal reserve statement, giving the position of the system as of Wednesday. Ordinarily the first week in January witnesses a heavy decline in the amount of money in use. The reports for last year and 1930, which covered a full week of the new year showed, respectively, declines of $107,000,000 and $176 000,000 in the amount of money in circulation.

In part the small reduction reported this week is due to the comparatively small increase in circulation that occurred last month, but even after allowing for the reduction in holiday demands this season the return movement of money to the banks was small.

Gold Shows Up $19,000,000.

Monetary gold stocks of the country rose $19,000,000 in the week to a total of $4,524,000,000, which was $615,000,000 above the low point of last June.

Gold reserves of the system increased $24,825,000 in the week while deposits went up $24,138,000 and reserve note circulation increased $2,198,000. The ratio of reserves to note and deposit liabilities was higher at 63 per cent, against 62.7 per cent last week. There was a further fall of $16,280,000 in member bank borrowings from the reserve banks which reduced the total of discounts to $251,102,000 the smallest figure since the week ended on Aug. 26, 1931. Holdings of bills bought in the open market declined $690,000 and holdings of United States government securities were up $173,000. The total volume of reserve bank credit outstanding fell $5,000,000.

Year End Changes Shown.

The combined statement of the twelve federal reserve banks reflected several changes incident to year end adjustments. This item of "all other liabilities" showed a fall of $30,447,000 to $16,613,000. This unusually wide change was interpreted as reflecting chiefly two actions, first, the payment of dividends to member banks and, second, the restoration to surplus of about $8,000,000 of special reserves which were set up at the end of 1931 against the depreciation on the reserve banks' holdings of United States government securities. The recovery in the prices of "governments" in the past year has made these reserves no longer necessary.

The surplus of the twelve reserve banks combined a gain of $19,178,000 in the week, reflecting the transfer to surplus account of these recovered reserves and of earnings over dividends. The item of "bank premises" which had been carried at $58,212,000 was written down $4,368,000 to $53,844,000.

Loans to brokers were reported as $394,000,000, unchanged from a week ago.

Nation's Gold Stocks Rise More than Eight Millions

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP) The New York Federal Reserve bank today received imports of $8,021,800 in gold from France and $1,094,700 from Holland. There was a loss of $900,200 through increases in foreign earmarkings. A gold shipment of $844,000 was received at San Francisco from China

GOLDBLATT BROS. SALES VOLUME UP 17% IN 1931

Goldblatt Brothers' report n sales increase of 17.26 per cent or $2,949,013 for the fiscal year ending Dec. 31. Total sales were reported as $20,030,794 as compared with $17,081,780 for the previous fiscal year.

These figures include the sales of the Hammond, Ind., store [formerly Kaufmann & Wolf] which was purchased Dec. 12, 1931, thus accounting partly for the sales increase.

"It is to be noted," said Maurice Goldblatt, president, "that our 1932 sales were the greatest in our 18 years of business existence."

"Although the increase was not quite $3,000,000, the unit sales in all our six stores was tremendous. Our records show that there were over 28 per cent more transactions in each individual store, during 1932 than in the previous year. This means that a great deal more merchandise was purchased from manufacturers and sold than in 1931."

POWER OUTPUT DROPS IN FINAL WEEK OF YEAR

Electric power output in the final week of December totaled 1,414,710,000 kilowatt hours, as compared with 1,554,473,000 hours in the preceding week and 1,523,652,000 in the like period last year. The production was reported yesterday by the National Electric Light association.

The association omitted the usual percentages because the week of 1931 included New Year's, while this year the holiday came a week later. Christmas is also included in last week's figures, whereas the holiday last year was included in the figures a week earlier.

Preliminary figures for the Chicago district on December production show a decrease of 6.1 per cent from last year. This is the best showing for any month of the year with the exception of January.

Reserve Board to Keep Huge Holdings of Federal Bonds

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—The federal reserve board today disclosed an intention to hold on to its huge portfolio of government securities as a part of its general program for accelerating the forces of economic recovery.

Announcement of the system's intentions came tonight from an open market policy conference of the federal reserve system which has been meeting with the federal reserve board to consider the "business, economic, and financial conditions" of the nation.

The system's policy calls for maintenance of large excess reserve balances in the member banks in the hope that these idle funds will find their way through credit channels to business, and "adjustments in the system's holdings in the open market account will be in accordance with this policy," the conference announced.

Expect No New Buying.

This announcement was taken to mean that the system would hold onto the great portfolio of governments it already has rather than to mean that new buying is being planned. The return of gold from abroad and of money from hoarding has been increasing the member bank reserves without aid from the reserve banks. During the week ended Jan. 4, the member banks' reserve account increased 32 million due largely to these forces.

During its heavy open market operations last year in which the system endeavored to fight off the forces of deflation it ran its holdings of governments up to the highest point in history, $1,851,000,000. Since last fall when the heavy buying tapered off little change has occurred in the system's holdings.

Drains of gold to Europe, hoarding and a movement among the banks to use the excess funds to reduce their indebtedness nullified the system's open market operations, but later the reversal of the gold movement and of the trend in hoarding began to increase the member bank reserves. By Jan. 4 the member bank reserves, both required and excess, had swollen to $2,514,000,000 of which $431,734,000 was in the Chicago federal reserve area.

Weigh Open Market Policy.

"Particular reference was made in the discussions to the workings and effects of the open market policy thus far pursued by the federal reserve system during the course of the economic depression," the statement said. "Consideration also was given to the attitude of the system in adjusting its operations to conditions and needs as they may change and develop.

"The first and immediate objective of the open market policy was to contribute factors of safety and stability in meeting the forces of deflation. The larger objectives of the system's open market policy, to assist and accelerate the forces of economic recovery, are now assuming importance."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 5.—It took less than ten minutes for the Guaranty Trust company to decide to lend $5,000,000 to Insull Utility Investments, Inc., in May, 1931, according to Robert E. Broome, the vice president who approved the loan. He told Lewis F. Jacobsen, counsel for the debentures holders of the now bankrupt Insull Utility Investments at a bankruptcy examination today how it was done.

Jacobsen, incredulous, repeated the question: "In ten minutes after you received a telephone inquiry as to whether or not you would make the loan you agreed to it?"

"In five minutes—certainly not more than ten," said Mr. Broome impatiently, "we make loans of $5,000,000 and $10,000,000 by telephone regularly."

He said that Leonard Buck, the New York representative of Halsey, Stuart & Co., who were Insull's investment bankers, telephoned to Robert L. Garner, a Guaranty Trust vice president with whom he was acquainted. Mr. Buck asked Mr. Garner if the Guaranty would be interested in making a loan of $5,000,000 to Insull Utility Investments, Inc., against collateral composed principally of stocks of three operating companies, plus a minor proportion of holding company stocks. Mr. Garner told Mr. Buck that Mr. Broome, who handled "street loans," would give him a telephone answer promptly.

CALGARY ACTION STIRS INTEREST IN CANADIAN LOANS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Jan. 5.—Calgary's repudiation of its American exchange on debenture payments in New York, Jan. 1, entailing a loss of $300,000 to United States interests, has directed attention to the amount of Canada's debts payable in New York, which up to last year was the chief financing center for the Dominion's loans.

The funded debt of all classes of Canadian borrowings from the federal government down to corporations is estimated at $7,602,000,000, of which 42.8 per cent is payable in United States funds, 47.6 per cent in Canadian funds, and 9.6 per cent in sterling.

In the last year the trend has been to raise as many of the country's loans within Canada owing to unfavorable exchange rates. With difficulty, however, this was done, Canada having only ten million people, and sooner or later the big bond issues will have to be sold on the American market, which is a primary reason for the opposition of banking interests to Calgary's action, as already the repudiation has caused a chill to foreign reception of Canadian issues.

The Quebec government today called for tenders for an issue of $9,000,000 in 30 year 4½ per cent bonds to be received up to noon, on Tuesday next.

Mutual National Bank Corrects Deposit Figure

Savings deposits of the Mutual National bank on Dec. 31 were $794,000 as compared with $738,000 on Sept. 30, officials stated yesterday. Deposits were previously reported as $654,000 as of Dec. 31. The latter figure was incorrectly reported to the Chicago Clearing house, through which THE TRIBUNE obtained its data.

FRISCO DELAYS PAYING INTEREST ON LOAN BY R.F.C.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Information that the St. Louis-San Francisco railway, which is in receivership, has failed to pay interest on at least one of the loans it received from the Reconstruction Finance corporation has been filed with the interstate commerce commission by the corporation.

A letter from George R. Cooksey, secretary of the corporation, to Oliver E. Sweet, director of the commission's bureau of finance, stated that quarterly interest of $27,221.92 due on Nov. 6 on a loan of $1,800,000 has not been paid. The road went into receivership Nov. 1 and its receivers are seeking a $3,000,000 loan.

The road has received permission from the commission to borrow $9,995,175 from the corporation. Approval by the commission does not necessarily mean, however, that the Reconstruction Finance corporation will make a loan.

One Default "Cured."

The letter from Cooksey to Sweet also said the Mississippi Export Railroad company defaulted on $2,200 of its $3,000 interest payment due Oct. 1, but that this default was later "cured."

The failure of the St. Louis-San Francisco to pay the interest was attributed today by C. W. Michel of New York, representative for the receivers, to the fact that no payment could be made without the consent of the St. Louis federal court which named the receivers. He said "doubtless the receivers will ask the court for permission to pay the interest as soon as they can get around to it." Michel added that the matter of payment lay in the hands of the court.

Want Prejudicial Loan.

Officials of the interstate commerce commission said the failure of the road to pay interest on loans made prior to the receivership would not prove prejudicial to the request of receivers for a loan secured by receivers' certificates.

Reconstruction Finance corporation loans today were approved by the interstate commerce commission for three railroads.

The Missouri Pacific was authorized to borrow $2,500,000, the Seaboard Air Line, $1,500,000, and the Toledo, Angola, and Western, $21,000.

The money is to be used in all instances to pay interest.

Hastings Says Fair will Help Trade But Tax Cuts Big Need

While suggesting the possibility that the Century of Progress exposition may signalize a spectacular and convincing revival of business in the country, Samuel M. Hastings, retiring president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, yesterday warned that real improvement rests largely on the disposition of all governing bodies to put their houses in order and economize.

Mr. Hastings' remarks were made in a talk before the Midwest Shippers' Advisory board at the Palmer house. "It is significant that more than 40 per cent of the 48 states of the Union have contracted for large and imposing exhibits at the exposition," Mr. Hastings said. "Foreign countries have agreed to participate, some of them having made exceedingly generous appropriations.

Tells Space Taken.

"Space in some of the most important exhibitions has been contracted for to an amount over $5,000,000 and arrangements have been made for the entertainment and various amusements to the extent of $4,000,000. Two hundred and thirty large industrial concerns will be exhibitors. An attendance of 50,000,000 persons is anticipated. Delegates to 1,500 conventions are expected to spend $75,000,000 in Chicago in 1933."

Mr. Hastings said that the business developed here would undoubtedly stimulate trade and activity in various other fields of business throughout the country.

The speaker asserted that the country was disappointed regarding the failure of congress to effect any real reduction in its expenditures.

Four Billion Expenditures.

"Unless the congressional appropriations committee shows a decided reversal in trend," he continued, "it looks as though we shall have congressional expenditures next year of approximately 4 billion dollars, exclusive of postal costs paid from postal receipts."

Mr. Hastings said business is waiting to see what will be done by the Illinois legislature concerning economy recommendations by the commission headed by Senator Martin R. Carlson and Representative Elmer Schnackenberg. He stated that the committee has been told engineers recommend that the 438 taxing bodies in Cook county be reduced to 130 and that there are 1,500 elective offices which can be abolished. Such action, he said, would save the taxpayers about $21,650,000 a year.

LIFE INSURANCE SHARES CLIMB IN LIVELY TRADE

Sun Life of Canada Up 15 Points.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Life insurance companies having stock outstanding in the hands of the public have made substantial gains in the unlisted market during the last few weeks.

The quotations for high grade insurance stocks have advanced briskly in the last few days and were particularly strong yesterday. The bid price for Sun Life of Canada stock spurted 15 points yesterday. Missouri State Life closed at 4½ bid, 5½ asked, compared with 4 bid, 5 asked the day before. Travelers Insurance gained 25 points to close at 365 bid, 375 asked. Aetna Life closed a point higher at 14 bid, 15 asked.

Life insurance stocks touched their low point about the middle of last year. At that time, when confidence in all types of financial institutions was at low ebb, policyholders' demands for loans reached its peak. The quotations on insurance stocks reflected this decline in public confidence.

Write Off Losses.

Since then many life insurance companies have followed the example set by the larger banks in writing off losses and reducing dividends.

Insurance stocks have by no means been immune to the factors that have affected the market for listed stocks. The following table shows how some of the most active life insurance company issues have fluctuated during the last four years:

SO THE REALTY EDITOR HEAVES A SIGH OF RELIEF

Many readers have been puzzled over the seemingly haphazard use of the words "real estator" and "realtor" in various real estate stories. But neither word is ever used casually or carelessly. To call a "realtor" a "real estator," or vice varsa, is one of the worst mistakes a real estate editor can make, and this is why.

To offset this copyright cognomen, the Cook county real estate board, which was an independent body prior to its merger with the Chicago Real Estate board, and not affiliated with the national body, decided several years ago it too should have a trick name. After long and violent argument it was decided that "real estator" would fill the bill. So for the last few years the Cook county members have called themselves "real estators" in conversation, speech, and in song.

With the merger of the two boards, now effective, all the "real estators" automatically have become "realtors." There's now only one possibility for a newspaper to slip on 'his delicate subject now, and that's to call a plain, everyday real estate dealer, who never even thought of joining a realty board, a "realtor." That's just too bad, and a roar of protest would surely follow.

Cutten Feeds the Pigeons.

Arthur Cutten, noted grain speculator, does his bit toward reducing the nation's corn surplus. Mr. Cutten has his office in the Continental bank building on the Jackson street side. Daily, but always at a different hour, tenants in the Board of Trade building across the street see Mr. Cutten receive from a clerk a bagful of corn, pour it on the window sill, and then return to his desk in an adjoining room. The pigeons make short work of it.

Chinese Buying Causes Advance in Silver Price

New York, Jan. 5.—(AP)—Continuing its recovery from last week's record low level, spot silver today was quoted at 25⅜ cents an ounce, up ½ cent from yesterday. The market's strength, dealers said, was due to buying for Chinese account. Sellers were not numerous. The market is now about 1 cent an ounce above the recent low.

COOLIDGE DEATH HALTS ADVANCE IN WALL STREET

Leaders Finish with Small Losses.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Jan. 5.—A flurry of selling brought on by news of the death of former President Calvin Coolidge about midwa, of the afternoon put a final quietus to an allday struggle of bull forces to extend the "currency inflation" drive they started in such promising fashion yesterday. Hard won gains of a point or more melted away all down the line leaving the final score no better than irregular.

Most of the recognized leaders like American Telephone, United States Steel, Atchison, Union Pacific, General Motors, Radio and Public Service closed fractionally lower. Trading was at a little faster tempo than during the previous session, the total footing up around 1,200,000 shares.

Recall Great Bull Market.

Word of the ex-President's passing had a profound effect in the street which had enshrined his name in the title of the greatest of all its bull markets—the alltime record advance which ended in the cataclysmic collapse of October-November, 1929. It was on assurances of his election in 1924 that the real upturn from the post war depression got under way it was recalled, the movement continuing without serious interruption until his famous pronouncement that he did not choose to run for reelection, made well toward the end of his second term.

Mr. Coolidge was known to have held very little stock, however and the effect of his death on market dealings today was largely psychological. Within the last year the statement had been made that the former president's stock holdings consisted of only fifty shares of United States Steel preferred.

Market Hit by Selling.

Profit taking by traders skeptical of the outlook for a major bull movement with business conditions in their present backward state had provided a big obstacle for the market makers up to the time of the news from Northampton. This selling was heavy throughout the forenoon, a large proportion of it evidently coming from traders who had accumulated substantial holdings during the quiet period of "bargain price" levels during and immediately preceding the Christmas holidays.

In spite of the sales, however, a few

Youngstown Area Steel Operations Seen Gaining

Youngstown, O., Jan. 5.—(AP)—Indications of an advance in steel operations were seen in an announcement that the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company would resume operations in another of its pipe mills tomorrow. Half of the Bessemer plants and 22 of 83 open hearths were reported operating, raising production above the week's opening rate of 17 per cent.

DRIVE AGAINST DOLLAR CONTINUES, BUT WITH DIMINISHING VIGOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 5.—The foreign drive against the dollar, spurred yesterday by cabled reports of what Senator Borah said he would introduce in the way of dollar "reflation," continued today, but with reduced intensity.

The French franc gained a further substantial fraction to the highest level in several weeks at 3.91 cents, while sterling again crossed the $3.34 level. Guilders improved sharply, Swiss francs reached a level they failed to attain in the closing days of December, while belgas improved a point Scandinavians rose half a dozen points.

The reopening of the Shanghai market after a long holiday, during which new war influences had become active, boosted the price of silver metal sharply and both taels and Hongkong dollars jumped wide fractions. In the case of the Shanghai tael the rate jumped 70 points, or nearly three-fourths of a cent.

Canadian dollars were firm.

Reduce Taxes, Spur Recovery, Says G. F. Swift

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Gustavus F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday that the government can immediately facilitate business recovery by lopping off a large portion of the tax burden which is now stifling commercial enterprise.

GUSTAVUS F. SWIFT.

Announcement was made at the meeting of the retirement of Louis F. Swift as a director of the company. His retirement closes a career extending over forty-seven years with the packing company, during which he has held nearly all the important positions in the organization. He retired as president a year ago after filling that office since 1903.

Name No Successors.

No successor will be named for Louis F. Swift nor for Edward F. Swift, who died last May. The new board of directors will consist of nine members, instead of eleven as formerly. The financial report for the fiscal year ended Oct. 29 was presented to stockholders. As previously reported, the company sustained a loss of $5,337,788 last year. Sales in 1932 were reported at $539,000,000, as compared with $710,000,000 in 1931, a decline of 24 per cent. Tonnage sales were approximately the same in both years.

The growth of government expenses in recent years and its depressing effect o nbusiness are described in the company's year book, which was distributed at the meeting.

Tells of Rising Tax Costs.

It points out that the total cost of government, federal, municipal, and local in the United States reached the astounding figure of 14 billion dollars in 1931. This compares with approximately 3 billion in 1931, the report asserts.

It is asserted that while in 1913 the cost of government took less than 10 per cent of the estimated national income it has steadily mounted until last year 30 per cent was taken for governmental purposes.

"The sooner the present tax burden is lightened so that it will be consistent with the earning power of the people, the sooner we shall have better business, better employment conditions, and better prices for farm products," the company declared.

CHICAGO BANKS' STOCKS SOAR IN LAST TWO DAYS

Northern Trust Up 75 Points.

Shares of a number of leading Chicago banks have made sharp advances in prices in the last few days. Of these the greatest advance was made by the stock of the Northern Trust company which on Tuesday was quoted at 375 bid and 380 asked. Late yesterday this stock was quoted at 450 bid and 475 asked—a gain of 75 points in the bid price in two days.

Shares of the First National bank on Tuesday were quoted at 168 bid and 172 asked, while yesterday the bid price was 177 and the ask 180—a nine point gain. Continental Illinois was quoted at 85½ bid and 87 asked on Tuesday contrasted with 91 bid and 93 asked yesterday—a 5½ point gain in the bid price.

Positions Are Favorable.

La Salle street yesterday attributed the advance to a number of factors, including the favorable positions shown in the bank call statements, which disclosed a high degree of liquidity together with increasing deposits and decreasing loans.

In the case of the Northern Trust, shares are closely held and any strengthening of the general markets are reflected by wide advances.

It was also stated that purchasers of bank shares were surprised at the favorable earnings reports of the banks during 1932 under most adverse conditions. With prospects held to be brighter for this year, the assumption is that bank earnings should show to even better advantage during the coming 12 months.

Other Shares Rise.

La Salle street commented that quotations of Harris Trust have been nominal during the last few days. Shares in this bank are very closely held and there have been no sales. It was stated that even a small demand would likely result in a sharp advance in the stock of this bank.

Chicago Title and Trust also has made a good showing in the last few days. Shares of this house were quoted at 103 bid and 106 asked on Wednesday, sold as high as 112 yesterday, and closed at 109 bid and 113 asked.

Shares of the New York banks likewise have been considerably stronger recently. Their advance likewise was attributed to the stronger general markets and to favorable financial positions.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat traders paid less attention to talk of prospective inflation in the currency Thursday and more to the strong commercial situation which is regarded as having developed of late. Chicago handlers sold 180,000 bu wheat to millers yesterday and there were strong intimations that the day's business was well in excess of this total. Part of the wheat sold was to mills in the southeast, with red winter bringing as much as 4c over the May delivery, the highest premium of the season.

For a number of days some operators have been expressing the belief there had been an unusual disappearance of wheat. This was apparently confirmed yesterday in a report by Nat C. Murray, the Clement, Curtis & Co. statistician, who estimated supplies on Jan. 1 on farms and in mills and elevators at 337,000,000 bu, against 324,000,000 bu last year. The visible supply on the same date as given by the department of agriculture was 169,000,000 bu, against 227,000,000 bu a year ago, suggesting total supplies in the three positions of 506,000,000 bu, or 45,000,000 bu less than last year.

Expect Better Demand.

In addition to a brisk demand for winter wheat from mills here there were intimations of a large flour business having been put through in the northwest. Mill brokers were persistent buyers at Minneapolis and the May future there has gained around ½c on Chicago in the last few days.

Wheat futures here held within a range of around ⅝c Thursday. May touched 46⅝c on the bulge, or ½c above the previous close, and the best price since Dec. 19. Profit taking developed on the bulge, but the finish was firm, with net gains of ⅛@⅜c. May being 46⅜c, July 46⅛@46¼c, and September 47@47⅛c. Liverpool sold at the best price since Dec. 7 early in the day, but eased on profit taking and closed unchanged to ¼c per bu higher. The May future in the latter market was 3⅝c over Chicago at the last. Winnipeg was ⅛c higher and Buenos Aires ⅛@¼c lower.

Cutten Talking Bullish.

Arthur W. Cutten paid one of his infrequent visits to the trading floor of the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday, and expressed himself to his friends as feeling friendly to the buying side of grain and stocks. He was quoted as saying inflation in the currency would have a stimulating influence on grain and stocks, and that the former was at too low a price to make short sales inviting.

Corn was dull and slightly easier, due to scattered selling, closing ⅛@¼c lower. May finished at 26¾c, July 28⅛c, and September 29⅛c. An increase in country offerings had a tendency to modify bullish sentiment.

Oats held within narrow limits and closed ⅛c higher, with May at 17⅛@17¼c and July at 17⅝@17¾c. Some Canadian oats were said to have been sold for export during the day. Rye again followed the action of wheat, but there was not the snap to the buying in evidence the previous day, and the close was ⅛@⅜c lower, with May 34¼c and July 33½c. Barley lost ¼c, with May closing at 29¼c.

BUTTER FUTURES LOWER

Butter and egg futures declined on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, butter closing with losses of ½@⅝c and eggs off ¼@½c. Heavy selling of butter was in evidence near the close. Movement of storage stocks was under last year and production reports showed the make only slightly less than last year. The mild weather had an added bearish influence. Liquidation was prominent on the long side of January and new selling was heavy in February, although better support was apparent in the latter delivery. March opened for the year with first sales at 22⅝c. Supply of refrigerator eggs has been cut to a very low figure and the daily storage news is of little interest. Fresh supplies were reported moderately heavy, which brought out selling in the cars: eggs, 11 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 73 cars; eggs, 11 cars. Deliveries: Butter, 73 cars. Prices follow:

TRADE EXHIBITS TO ATTRACT MANY BUYERS TO CITY

Shoe Dealers Here Monday, Merchants Later.

Several important trade events which are expected to bring several thousand buyers to Chicago are scheduled to take place in the next thirty days. The first, which opens Monday, is the convention of the National Shoe Retailers' association.

More than 600 display rooms have been reserved in Chicago hotels for exhibitions during the convention. While primarily a retailers' gathering the convention will be a gathering of representatives of all branches of the shoe and leather industry.

The second important event is the semi-annual convention of the Interstate Merchants council which will be held Feb. 6 to 11.

Plan Series of Shows.

It was reported yesterday that more than 500 Chicago wholesalers and manufacturers are planning a concurrent series of spring openings during the week of the council's convention. The exhibits are expected to attract more than 20,000 out of town buyers to the city. The event is sponsored by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

It is estimated that the shoe dealers' convention will bring several thousand buyers and retailers to Chicago from points through this country and Canada. Style conferences, clinics on store problems, and business meetings are scheduled. The convention will last from Jan. 8 through the 11th. Meetings of the convention proper will be held at the Palmer house.

Style Show at Sherman.

Details of the merchants' convention are now being worked out. A style show will be held at the Hotel Sherman where 85 exhibits of apparel millinery, accessories, and men's wear will be held. Other concurrent shows are the curtain and drapery exhibit sponsored by local manufacturers and distributors and the gift show is to be held by the Gift, Art, Novelty and Novelties association.

Other events, which will add to the buyers expected in this city during the next month, are the eastern manufacturers and importers exhibit at the Palmer house, Jan. 30 to Feb. 11; the style exhibit of the Morrison hotel, Jan. 30 to Feb. 6, and the national house furnishings show at the Stevens hotel, Jan. 8 to 14.

BUYERS EXPECT FURNITURE SALES TO RISE THIS YEAR

Modern Styles on Display at Show.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Out of town merchants and furniture buyers attending the first Century of Progress furniture market in the Merchandise Mart, which opened Tuesday, are planning for improved business in 1933, according to D. D. Fennell. Mr. Fennell is secretary-treasurer of the Institute of Store Decoration of America, an association of exhibitors of furniture and household furnishings in the Merchandise Mart and their customers.

"The dealer is buying cautiously," said Mr. Fennell. "He is not interested in prices so much, for he knows the furniture dollar will buy twice as much as in 1929. Individuality and authenticity of design are what he is looking for.

Test Modern Styles.

"There is much talk about modern furniture in this market, and most of the manufacturers are showing one suite of modern furniture. But it is only a test, a feeling of the pulse. Certainly 1933 modern furniture is more livable than the modern styles of 1925 and 1926."

"The buying that will be done in this market is principally for emergency demands," he continued, "as the merchants will not have their annual statements ready until February, so that they cannot get money from their bankers to buy stock until then. The whole merchandising operation today is largely a banker operation.

"However, they are planning now their orders for early spring. Moreover, stocks have never been so low in the history of the furniture industry. When the market does break we are going to have a sellers' market for the first time in 15 years. But it will come about gradually.

Gains to Ebb and Flow.

"Improvement in the market during 1933 will be like the tide, ebbing and flowing, in my opinion. But there will be much more activity than in 1932. No one expects a repetition of 1932 in the industry. Merchants believe that 1933 will reward good judgment, courage, careful selection, and concentration on the job."

The Institute of Store Decoration of America was organized after a questionnaire sent by Merchandise Mart furniture exhibitors to 100 retailers brought in 60 replies, from which it was deduced that the greatest deterrent to selling furniture was the lack of good display.

The exhibitors, therefore, organized a free service to merchants on showing furniture as it would be displayed in the home."

TWO ATTORNEYS BUY ASSETS OF THE ORRINGTON

BY AL CHASE.

Henry S. Blum of Blum & Jacobson, and Lazarus Krinsley of Foreman, Bluford, Krinsley & Schultz, yesterday took title to the assets and property of the Orrington Hotel corporation at 1710 Orrington avenue, Evanston, from Logan L. Mullins, receiver, subject to a $1,750,000 first mortgage bond issue and a $175,000 chattel mortgage. This is the result of a recent sale at which Mr. Blum and Mr. Krinsley, representing creditors, bought the corporation property and are now holding it for their benefit, subject, of course, to the mortgages against the property.

Mr. Blum and Mr. Krinsley three years ago filed a bill to dissolve the corporation and recently a decree was entered that the corporation be dissolved and the assets sold to satisfy the claims of its creditors. This has now been done.

Meanwhile a move to reorganize the bond issue is under way by the bondholders' protective committee, who have instituted foreclosure proceedings. The Orrington hotel originally was financed with a bond issue underwritten by the Greenebaum Sons Investment company. The interest rate is 6 per cent.

Pays 3 Per Cent to Bondholders.

Mr. Krinsley stated yesterday that the receiver, Mr. Mullins, has been able to make the hotel earn enough to pay the taxes, pay the receiver's expenses and in addition make a semi-annual payment of 3 per cent on the interest due the bondholders, which defaulted a year ago.

The Metropolitan Trust company, receiver for the four story Hyde Park Arms apartments at 5316-18 Harper avenue, reports $286 cash on hand on Dec. 1, 1932, according to T. E. Williams, secretary of the bondholders' protective committee. The total receipts for the period from Oct. 17, 1930, to Dec. 1, 1932, were given as $42,670. The total disbursements were $42,384. The occupancy on Dec. 1 is reported to have been as follows: Fifty rooms rented and seventeen vacant. This was a Holzer, Inc., issue of $120,000 at 7 per cent, since paid down to $99,000.

Two Leases Canceled.

Cancellation of two downtown leases were filed for record yesterday. Albert Hoefeld, lessee, assigned the 198 year lease on the eight story building at the southwest corner of Washington and Dearborn to Owen F. Aldis and others, owners of the property. The leasehold estate, buildings and subleases were actually conveyed by the Forty North Dearborn Building corporation, of which Mr. Hoefeld is president, to Joseph E. Nolan.

The ninety-nine year lease on the property at 430-32 South Wabash avenue has been canceled. The original lease was by Thomas Murdoch to Frederick R. Barnheisel, commencing May 1, 1903. Carrie M. Stone of Brookline was lessee when the lease was canceled by the Northern Trust company as trustee.

Refinancing a Tough Problem.

TO THE EDITOR: I am writing about my home at —— avenue. I purchased the property ten years ago for $41,000 and when the mortgage was due the balance was $15,000. The mortgage holder told me that if I would pay $5,000 this year he would extend the balance of $10,000. I have paid the $5,000 and now he wants the balance paid.

With our business in its present condition it is impossible for me to do much more than pay the interest, taxes, and the upkeep, all of which have been taken care of to date. I would like to know where I can go to obtain a loan of $10,000 on this property, which should be worth fully $20,000 at the present time.—W. E.

ANSWER: Unless the mortgage holder made the offer to renew the loan for $10,000 in writing, you are up against it. Today it is very difficult to secure a new loan for the amount of $10,000, regardless of the security offered. The best solution is to try and secure an extension on the balance due for twelve months. We believe mortgage loan conditions will improve during that period of time. The Home Loan bank in Evanston or one of its member building and loan associations would only consider a loan of $5,500. Recently we completed a survey of fifty loaning institutions, which included insurance companies, banks, mortgage houses, etc., and were unable to locate one institution making real estate loans in Chicago today.

No Loans on Vacant.

TO THE EDITOR: In order to assist my parents in paying off their mortgage, I would appreciate some information. In 1925 I purchased a residential lot in Niles Center, buying it outright from the —— Realty company for $1,375 cash. Since that time I have paid all annual installments on assessments for improvements, such as street paving, sewer, water, etc. The total assessments paid to date amount to $300. There is a balance for street paving prorated over a number of years. I would like to get a loan on this lot or sell it at a reduced figure.—F. A. P.

ANSWER: We do not know of an organization making loans on vacant property today nd you will find it extremely difficult to dispose of the property mentioned at the present time. We believe real estate conditions will improve during the next twelve months and if possible suggest you withhold sacrificing this property, at least for the present.

TROUBLES OF OIL INDUSTRY LAID TO OVEREXPANSION

Exorbitant Taxes Another Factor, Says Leader.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 5.—Many of the present ills of the petroleum industry are directly traceable to overexpansion in recent years, says J. E. Boudreau, manager of the New York division of the Ethyl Gasoline corporation, in a report on business conditions.

"In the common race for distribution and gallonage, money was advanced for rights to dealer locations, stations erected, jobbers subsidized, and long term leases executed with little or no thought to any possible change in existing economic conditions," he declares. "The industry has been further handicapped by exorbitant gasoline taxes, which have brought in their wake a system of evasion that has reached criminal proportions.

Tax of 100 Per Cent.

"When honestly operated companies are required to pay a tax amounting to approximately 100 per cent of the wholesale price of the product, it can easily be seen that the tax evaders can market gasoline at prices which tend to demoralize the existing price structure.

"Looking at the industry from a favorable viewpoint, it is clear that present conditions have been responsible for many basic changes which will tend toward better operation in the future. The necessity for retrenchment has brought about a study of refining operations which has resulted in lower costs of production.

"Unprofitable marketing units have been abandoned and sales departments reorganized on more efficient lines. The general picture of this trend indicates that when business improves in the petroleum industry, our customers will be in a sounder position than they have been at any time in the past."

Earnings Drop Halted.

The downward trend of earnings in the oil industry appear to have been reversed in 1932 and the profits for the year apparently offset losses of about $90,000,000 in 1931, according to J. W. Van Dyke, chairman of the Atlantic Refining company, in a letter to stockholders.

Mr. Van Dyke said the progress of the industry was threatened by heavy taxation and legislative efforts to restrict development of economic highway transportation.

CATTLE MARKET DOES ABOUT-FACE -PRICES ADVANCE

Receipts Lightest for a Thursday Since May.

The cattle market did a complete around-about on the second smallest Thursday receipts since last May. Prices ruled strong to 25c higher, light and medium weights of choice quality leading the advance. Though inclined to drag at times, the much neglected heavy cattle managed to emerge on a slightly stronger price basis, too, the shortage in total numbers apparently turning some orders into the weightier kinds that would ordinarily be filled in the light and medium weight class.

Only 4,000 cattle were unloaded on the market yesterday. Thursday supplies have been slightly under 5,000 several times, but only one Thursday since last May shows an actual tally of less than 4,000. The top at $7.10, highest of the week, was paid by United Dressed Beef buyers for 893 lb yearling steers. Several loads of 979@1,174 lb averages cashed at $7.00, but the bulk of the day's crop of beef steers had to go within a range of $4.00@6.25, with common grades carrying fair "kill" down to $3.25. Cattle selling at $4.50 and below showed the full strength of the trade.

Hog Prices Rally.

Hogs rallied on strong support after a top heavy and shade lower opening yesterday, with the general average costs of most droves fully steady for the day. Top light failed to equal the high point of Wednesday's close, but the peak at $3.25 was paid freely for the right kind of 180@225 lb averages. The general average figured $3.10. Further gains were registered in the wholesale market for fresh pork which increased the buying power of local houses, but as hog prices sagged at the start buyers encountered plenty of competition from the east, where supplies were unusually low.

Eastern buying orders are largest since last March. It is estimated that about 27,000 hogs will be shipped east for slaughter this week. In the last six months weekly shipments from Chicago have been running mostly from 10,000 to 15,000. Receipts at eastern points are smallest of the winter and prices there have gone up 50c since the close of last week.

Lamb Prices Advance.

A deadlock in the lamb market yesterday, while buyers were resisting an upturn, was followed by a buoyant closing trade, with gains for the day amounting to 10@25c. All classes shared in the improvement. Most of the good grades sold to packers and shippers at $6.00@6.35, both natives and fed westerns reaching the outside figure. Receipts were comparatively light. Yearling wethers sold at $5.00, while two year old wethers and a few two year old ewes cashed for slaughter at $4.00. Old wethers sold at $3.25 and old ewes at $2.75.

EXPORTERS BUY CASH LARD; PRICES CLOSE AT ADVANCE

Cash lard is being bought for shipment to Germany to take advantage of the proposed increase in the duty which becomes effective Feb. 15. It is understood to be a special tariff regulation. Aside from this demand from Germany export business was not large and domestic consumption is of fair volume. Better tone in grains and hogs, with shipping demand for the latter the best since last March, made it comparatively easy to advance prices.

Net gains on futures were 10@17½c, near deliveries being the strongest. Liverpool lard was 6d to 1s higher. Export clearances were 452,480 lbs and of bacon 5,000 lbs.

Cash lard prices were stronger in Chicago, regular being $4.70, loose $4.15, and leaf $4.12½. Bellies were in demand with futures 7½c higher, while cash lots were $3.62½. The pork loin market attracted more attention, prices ranging from $5.50@8.00. Prices follow:
